CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR
BAKING POWDER
THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powder. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most beautiful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food. It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country. THE CITY COUNCIL.
Plans Adopted for the New Ward School-house.
 A COUNCILMAN PETITION FOR THE ABATEMENT OF A NUISANCE.
 An adjourned meeting of the City Council held Monday evening. Councilmen Barker, Burr and Foster failed to respond at the roll call. A motion to dispense with the reading of the record was declared out of order. President Federhen ruling the reading must be commenced. Begun and then dispensed with "further reading."
 More School Accommodations.
 A communication from Mayor Porter set forth that the School Committee was desirous of occupying the house recently purchased by the city of Thomas O'Brien, and occupied by Mr. Burke, after certain partitions and other alterations are made.
 Councilman Thompson subsequently introduced a motion, which was adopted, viz: The School Committee are hereby authorized to use the vacant building owned by the city on land recently purchased of O'Brien in Ward Four for school purposes and make the alterations necessary.
 Approved by School Committee.
 A communication from the School Committee unanimously accepted the plans for the new William School. Placed in file.
 A Dangerous Sidewalk.
 Councilman Jones presented the petition of Thomas Curtis and sixteen others, calling attention to the grade and condition of the sidewalk at the corner of Franklin and Water streets adjoining property of W. H. Doble, asking that the curbing be raised and a paved gutter put in. Referred to Committee on streets.
 Common Street Line.
 Councilman Shea presented the petition of John E. Burns and others for the relocation of Common street as proposed by the County Commissioners, on the western side between land of J. Fallon & Sons and Reuben Townsend. Referred to Committee on Streets.
 Plans for Willard School-house.
 The special committee on plans recommended the following order:
 That the plans and specifications prepared by Messrs. Sturgis & Co. for a school building in Ward Four be now accepted and placed in the hands of the Commissioner of Public Works and he is hereby instructed to advertise in the public prints for proposals to build and building according to said plans and specifications, excepting all Quincy grants shall be included, and report to the Council at the earliest time possible the amount of said proposals. The right reserved to reject any and all proposals.
 A controversy arose over the granite trimmings, Councilmen Thompson and Shea thinking it doubtful if red granite could be obtained in Quincy, and favoring alighting other colors.
 Mayor Porter thought gray, light or blue would not be in good taste. Thought red might be obtained in the new Donahue quarry, but that was over the line into Brantree, also in some others. Regretted the chairman of the School Committee was not present.
 Councilman Pinkham wished the Council to see the plans before accepting, and moved to lay the order on the table one week.
 Councilmen Burke and Shea opposed.
 Councilman Stearns believed in some uniform color.
 Councilman Morse favored red if it could be obtained.
 Councilman Shaw called for the plans.
 Mayor Porter said they had been taken to the State Inspector that day and were to have been returned, but had not been.
 The motion to lay on the table was lost.
 An amendment of Councilman Morse that bids for granite be confined to Quincy firms was, after debate, withdrawn.
 An amendment of Councilman Thompson inserting the word "trimmings" after "granite" was passed and the order adopted.
 State Election, Nov. 5.
 The Committee on Elections reported an order that warrants be issued and attested by the Mayor, for the State election.
 Miscellaneous Business.
 The applicant to exhibit a freak of nature was given leave to withdraw.
 The order granting a license to withdraw on her petition that a sum of money be paid to her instead of building a wall was voted.
 Thomas H. Hayes' application for a license to collect junk was referred to the Committee on Licenses.
 The application of Henry Curtis for Military Aid was allowed.
 The Committee on Streets recommended that the new street, forty feet wide, from Franklin street to Water street, be laid out, for which purpose a hearing be given Oct. 21st, at 8.30 p. m. Adopted.
 Upon motion of Councilman Morse, Councilman Lovett drew the following as traverse jurors for the Superior Court at Dedham, the first Monday of October next: William W. Pennington, Francis A. Massey and John D. Nutting.
 Councilman Shaw's motion that the $1000 appropriated for sewerage plans be spent under the directions of the Committee on Sewers was adopted.
 Upon motion of Councilman Fairbanks the ordinance concerning the laying out of streets and sidewalks, "was taken from the table and referred to the Committee on Ordinances.
 The order appropriating $3000 for Whitwell street was passed to be ordained; also the order granting the American Telephone Co. certain rights.

Political.
 The Republicans of Quincy held their Representative Convention last Saturday evening to nominate one representative for the legislature. Charles L. Hammond was chairman and J. P. Bigelow secretary. Forty-two delegates were present out of a total of forty-seven. Warren W. Adams, the present representative was nominated unanimously by acclamation. The candidate was sent for and accepted the nomination in a brief speech. The following delegates were elected to the Fifth Norfolk Representative Convention to ratify the nomination of Quincy and Weymouth: W. W. Ewell, Albert Keating, W. S. Williams, T. F. Burke and C. A. Faunce.
 The Democrats held their County and Councilor Convention at Dedham today. Certificates of nomination and nomination papers for candidates for State officers must be filed with the Secretary of State at least fourteen days previous to the election.
 The Democratic Senatorial Convention was held at Quincy today. Dr. William Everett of Quincy is the only name prominently mentioned.
 Sigourney Butler and ex-Representative Josiah Quincy, two able and popular young men, may be the Democratic candidates for Representatives.
 The Weymouth Republicans have re-nominated Louis A. Cook for Representative, and the other nominee is Joseph A. Cushing, the secretary of the School Committee of Weymouth, and a bookkeeper by occupation.
 Weymouth Democrats will hold their Representative caucus this evening, and ex-Representative John A. Holbrook will probably be the nominee.
 The gubernatorial vote in Quincy last night was: Russell, 1,185; Ames, 1,101; Earle, 44. For Lieutenant Governor Brackett had a plurality of 49 over Corcoran. In the Senatorial contest, Dr. Everett of Quincy, and J. P. Bigelow of Weymouth are candidates for Representatives voted out of Quincy with pluralities varying from 20 to 226.
 The Democratic City Committee has organized with Sigourney Butler as chairman, Josiah Quincy as secretary, and John J. Byron as secretary, and James F. Burke as treasurer.
 The Democratic Convention for the nomination of two representatives will be held this Saturday evening. Rev. Edward A. Horton of Boston, Rev. Solon W. Bush of Andover, Rev. R. S. Morrison of Cambridge, Rev. George H. Young of Boston, Rev. B. A. Maynard of Cambridge, Rev. J. J. Barrows of Boston, Rev. W. L. Lawrence of Dorchester, Rev. Henry F. Jenks of Canton, Rev. Charles G. Ames of Boston, Rev. J. H. Allen of Cambridge, Rev. Charles G. Ames of Boston, Rev. A. M. Lord of Arlington, Rev. A. D. May, D. D., of Boston, Rev. O. S. Dean, D. D., of Holbrook, Rev. Crawford Nightingale of Dorchester, Rev. J. H. Whitmore of Stoneham, Rev. John B. Green of Gloucester, Rev. J. H. Hogan of West Dedham, and many of the local pastors of all denominations.

The programme as outlined in last week's PATRIOT was carried out with but two exceptions. John Quincy Adams Brackets, the Lieutenant Governor and Rev. Edward Norton were unable to be present, and Rev. C. R. Eliot pronounced the benediction in place of the last-named. The Rutgers school made a quartette sang several selections, and an enlarged choir sang three hymns. Letters of regret were received from Governor Ames, ex-pastor John D. Wells, the venerable Charles Brock of Milton, the pastor of the First Church of Exeter, N. H., Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, Rev. Dr. Storrs of Brooklyn, N. Y., but formerly of Brantree, and many others. To give a verbatim report of the morning and afternoon services would take twenty-five volumes of the Patriot, and it would be difficult to make short abstracts of each, therefore the attempt will not be made. The society is soon to publish the complete proceedings, copies of which may be obtained. All the addresses were interesting. Our townsmen, Charles Francis Adams and Josiah Quincy received the closest attention. Lunch was served in the chapel both before and after the afternoon services, and many enjoyed the hospitality of the ancient church.
 Brussels soap is considered by far the best in the market by our most competent judges.
 —Calais has a new postmaster, Mr. Chas. A. Gross, who assumed the office Monday.

Ben Butler says the way to begin to get rich is to let a house and lot, and to let the rent for a year off the mortgage. At that rate, however, a man who rented the house might just as well buy and own a house of his own on the same terms.
Boulanger, safe in England, can assure himself as long as he likes, firing manifestos at France. Manifestos are harmless, which is more than can be said of the other ammunition Boulanger has brought to bear on his country if he had been allowed to go on.
 The American working men and women who are making the tour of Europe express themselves shocked at the irreligion, the unsteadiness, the immorality and the lack of domesticity in Paris. But numbers of our fellow countrymen trymen get used to this state of things in Paris, and like it.
 There has been enough blowing about the triumph of American ship building as exhibited in the speed of the new cruiser Baltimore. It is time now for us to recall the fact that she was designed by W. H. White, at present chief constructor of the British navy, and that the plans for her machinery were made by the British firm of Humphreys & Tennant. Secretary Whitney bought the design and plans.

At a press banquet on an honored newspaper man, John B. Wright, of Boston, both men and women journalists were present and both took part in the speech making. The innovation of having also the "soprano squeak" along with the bass and baritone voices at banquets seems to be taken up rapidly. For some time women have made din speeches occasionally in England, and there are several ladies of title who do the thing very creditably.
Women in the Civil Service.
 Women have a long way to travel yet before they establish their equal footing in the civil service. It is a rugged, uphill road in the bargain. Miss Mary Alexander, of Philadelphia, last spring passed the best civil service examination ever recorded in this country of anybody, male or female. Her name was on the list for appointment; it is on the list still. Miss Alexander has no appointment. Women are not in demand for anything higher than typewriters and stenographers, and the lower paying places in the civil service departments, the places paying $600 to $900 a year. If now and then a woman gets a better office, it is the exception. For the higher paying clerkships the chiefs want men and voters, no matter how good an examination a woman has passed.
 Thomas H. Cummings, of Boston, will lecture in the basement of St. Gregory's church next Sunday evening on "100 years of Catholicity in New England." The proceeds of the lecture will be devoted to the Altar society.

The First Church of Quincy.
 ESTABLISHED 1877.
John H. Pray, Sons & Co.
 CELEBRATES THE 25TH ANNIVERSARY OF ITS FORMATION.
 A memorable event in the history of the ancient First Church of Quincy was the commemorative services on Sunday last of the completion of 250 years since the formation. A church which has had but eleven settled ministers, viz:
 William Tompson, pastor, ordained Sept. 24, 1639, died Dec. 16, 1668.
 Henry Flint, teacher, ordained March 17, 1640, died April 27, 1668.
 Moses Fiske, pastor, ordained Nov. 11, 1672, died August 10, 1708.
 Joseph Marsh, ordained May 18, 1708, died March 3, 1726.
 John Hancock, ordained Nov. 2, 1726, died May 1, 1774.
 Lemuel Briant, ordained Dec. 11, 1774, resigned Oct. 22, 1793.
 Anthony Whitt, ordained February 5, 1795, died Jan. 18, 1804.
 Peter Whitney, ordained Feb. 5, 1800, died March 3, 1843.
 William Parsons Lund, ordained June 3, 1835, died March 21, 1887.
 John Deane Wells, ordained Dec. 27, 1860, resigned May 28, 1876.
 Daniel Munro Wilson, installed March 24, 1880.
 The pulpit on this occasion was profusely decorated with potted plants and ball flowers, and over the same was a large cross of golden rod. On the wall to the right and left were the dates in large figures, 1639 and 1889. The mural monuments to Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their noble wives, and to the ex-pastors Rev. Peter Whitney and Dr. William P. Lund were festooned with ivy.
 Rev. D. M. Wilson, the pastor, preached an interesting historical sermon in the morning at 10.30, a large congregation being present. His text was ninth verse of the second chapter of Haggai: "The glory of this latter house shall be greater than the former said the Lord of hosts; and in this place will I give peace, said the Lord of hosts." It dealt with the organization of the church in 1639, and its subsequent history under the several pastors; of the prominent men that have been connected with it, of the meetings houses, etc. The anniversary services were held in the afternoon at 2 o'clock, lasting until 5 o'clock, and many stood. It is estimated that there were over 1000 present, including the following ministers: Rev. Edward A. Horton of Boston, Rev. Solon W. Bush of Andover, Rev. R. S. Morrison of Cambridge, Rev. George H. Young of Boston, Rev. B. A. Maynard of Cambridge, Rev. J. J. Barrows of Boston, Rev. W. L. Lawrence of Dorchester, Rev. Henry F. Jenks of Canton, Rev. Charles G. Ames of Boston, Rev. J. H. Allen of Cambridge, Rev. Charles G. Ames of Boston, Rev. A. M. Lord of Arlington, Rev. A. D. May, D. D., of Boston, Rev. O. S. Dean, D. D., of Holbrook, Rev. Crawford Nightingale of Dorchester, Rev. J. H. Whitmore of Stoneham, Rev. John B. Green of Gloucester, Rev. J. H. Hogan of West Dedham, and many of the local pastors of all denominations.

Women are not in demand for anything higher than typewriters and stenographers, and the lower paying places in the civil service departments, the places paying $600 to $900 a year. If now and then a woman gets a better office, it is the exception. For the higher paying clerkships the chiefs want men and voters, no matter how good an examination a woman has passed.

SATURDAY, OCT. 5, 1889.

It was Mutual.

They had whirled around in the steps of the waltz, and dimly had spread o'er his face, for he found just then, at the end of the dance, a button had caught in her lace. He colored, and then, in embarrassed tones, when the dance had gone quite through, "Pray pardon my boldness," he said with a smile, "But you've got me attached to you."

Then, regisally glancing, she answered at once, "Don't let that worry you so; for quickly you'd see, if you'd only half try. This attachment is mutual—you know."

A Suggestion.

Furnished for publication by the W. C. T. U.

In your last issue you speak of a committee, who attended a meeting of our City Council to prepare a "burlesque" of the same, to raise funds for the proposed granite monument. We suggest to them a procession of twenty-five prominent citizens of Wollaston, marching to City Hall, carrying a mammoth petition on a wheelbarrow, asking for a loan of four millions of dollars to improve Wollaston. They have no hand of music loaded there, but have a physician who plays on a fiddle, and a student to employ him for escort. Here in the heart of the city we have a library building, a Durgin & Merril's block, a Stone Temple, a City Hall, a brick block with several stories, a brick hotel in excellent order, an Adams school fund building, two parks and plenty of cemeteries. What have they got in Wollaston? Echo answers,—what?

Speaking of Wollaston, reminds us of the article in the same paper, wherein the writer calls the latter town "a place in its vicinity 'disease breeding places'."

The old nursery rhyme reads:

There was a man in our town,

And he was wondrous wise,

He jumped into a bramble bush,

And scratched out both his eyes.

If Capt. Merrill don't scratch his eyes out, we are a different sort of bramble bush from what he takes him for.

STEVE.

Personal Biography.

Munsell's Sons latest volume of American Ancestry contains the following sketch of the ancestry of our townsman, Mr. E. Williams, of Wollaston:

"William, Erastus Edward, of Wollaston, Mass., born at Marshfield, Mass., Aug. 17th, 1842, began lecturing on various subjects at seventeen; was postmaster at Fairmount, Mass. 1862; delivered a paper before the Boston District of Internal Revenue in 1865; editor of the Plymouth County Journal in 1876; connected with Navy Department in 1879; with Customs Service, 1878-80; with Lee & Shepard, publishers, since 1880. Delivered an oration before G. A. R. at Marshfield, Mass., in 1890; at Hampton, Va., in 1890; at Charlestown, Mass., in 1887; at Quincy, Mass., in 1889; all of which have been published. Made many numerous addresses, contributor to press. Son of George of Marshfield, Mass., born there July 18th, 1803, died there March 17th, 1850, an exemplary man, held in high esteem. (Married Dec. 20th, 1828, Susan Robinson Burdett, daughter of Andrew Burdett, born Aug. 23d, 1789, died Aug. 24, 1829; nephew of Sir Francis Burdett of London, and related to the Baroness Burdett Courts). Son of Capt. Samuel, of Marshfield, Mass., born there Nov. 3, 1770, died there March 12th, 1851, a successful sea captain. (Married Susan May, born Aug. 20th, 1777, died May 1, 1861); had three brothers, Nathan, Abner and Timothy, and two sisters, Sarah and Mary; son of Timothy, of Marshfield, Mass., (married Sarah Peters); son of Samuel of Marshfield, Mass., (married Sarah Peters); son of Timothy, who served in the Revolution, in 1780, and who donated a parcel of land as a common in South Marshfield; son of George who came over with the pilgrims when a minor, and lived in Governor Winslow's family, and went with Myles Standish to see Massasoit.

The above traces Mr. Williams back in a direct line to the Pilgrim Fathers.

Household Receipts.

GRAPE RELIEF. Cut one dozen bunches of grapes, pick out the seeds, and make a syrup of one quart vinegar, and one and a half pints of sugar, and half an ounce bruised cloves. Boil until syrup becomes thick, then put in the grapes, cover the kettle, steam in the liquor until tender, and serve cold.

RAISIN TARTS. Take six cups and cut up with a biscuit cutter. Use two cups for each tart. For the inside, one cup of chopped raisins stewed with one-half cup of sugar.

CANNED APPLES. In the autumn when apples are plentiful, it is a good plan to can as many as convenient for winter use, and in many cases the winter's supply of fruit is exhausted and fresh fruit is not to be had for love or money they will be found useful.

PEEL, quarter and core tart apples—crusts are best; weigh them and allow one ounce for each quart. Use two cups for each tart. For the inside, one cup of chopped raisins stewed with one-half cup of sugar.

Put musty pillows in a strong draft on a sunny day and they will soon freshen. But never put a feather pillow into the sun.

If a fruit stain will not come out when boiling water is poured through it, light a match and hold so that the fumes strike the stain.

For biliousness squeeze the juice of a lime or small lemon into half a glass of cold water, and stir in a little baking soda; drink while it foams. To be taken with rising in the morning. This will also relieve the sick headache, if taken in the beginning.

Chloride of lime is an infallible preventive for rats, as they die from its odor as from a pestilence. It should be thrown down their holes and spread about wherever they would be likely to come, and should be renewed once a fortnight.

Costly Watches.

John Huntington and his son, W. T. R. Huntington of Cleveland, own two of the best watches in the world. They are duplicates, and were ordered by the senior Huntington in 1834 in Geneva, Switzerland. He agreed to pay $5,000 in gold for two watches that should combine every movement then known to the art of watch-making. A description of one answers for both. The case is of pure gold; the movement 40 pieces. One of the large lap appears four smaller dials. The one at the top shows by a diagram of the sky the changes of the moon, the firmament being studded with golden stars. The next dial to the right shows the leap year, the tiny hand moving around the circle once in four years, and the auxiliary hand shows each month. On the dial at the bottom is a hand marking the quarters, and another showing the day of the month. At the left, on the fourth miniature dial, is a hand pointing out the day of the week, and another the tide as it ebbs and flows. Around the larger dial, besides the usual hour and minute hand, moves a second hand and an extra hand, which is arranged that the distance between two hands at the finish is accurately noted in quarter seconds. By pressing a button the past hour is struck on a deep-toned bell, of a chime; the quarters are a more shrill note, and a rapidly beating time-keeper gives the minutes. The watch is a time-winder, and one spring furnishes the motive power. Where there is friction the pivots are set in rubies.—New York Sun.

Don't be swindled into using any other, but insist on having Brussels soap.

A Sensible Man.

Would use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs. It is curing more cases of Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup and all Throat and Lung troubles, than any other medicine. The proprietor has authorized any druggist to give you a sample bottle free. If you are cured, send him this great remedy. Large bottles 50 cents and $1.

Temperance.

Practical Results of Prohibition.

Another objection and one heard often from any other, is that the practical results of prohibition do not justify the adoption of the Amendment. This is simply a matter of evidence. The Internal Revenue Report gives the number of liquor dealers in each State, and I have compared the three leading Prohibitory States with Massachusetts in the following table: Maine, one dealer to 641 people, Iowa, one dealer to 546 people, Kansas, one dealer to 1,115 people, Massachusetts, one dealer to 257 people. Massachusetts has more than twice as many dealers in proportion to population as Maine, or Iowa, and four times as many in proportion to population as Kansas. In other words prohibition in Maine, or Iowa, or Kansas, is more effective in reducing the number of liquor dealers than license or local option laws. In this respect the practical results justify prohibition. Every tax receipt issued in a license State usually represents a man doing business, but that is not the case in a prohibitory State, for scores of men who have paid the tax are arrested and imprisoned under a prohibitory law. But assuming that every receipt issued in a license State represents a man doing business, yet even then prohibition is from two to four times more effective in reducing the number of dealers than any other form of legislation.

Dish Cloths vs. Dish Rags.

"I guess you will find a dish rag in some place about the sink," was the direct answer to the question of the help in the emergency. What she found was a black, damp rag, with the peculiar odor of many stale dish waters clinging about it. Never had attacked the different members of this family, and the neighbor, wondered if here were not the clue to its origin, as she put that dish rag into the stove and supplied its place with a dish cloth. One of the most difficult things to take an ordinary servant girl is to take proper care of the dish cloths. After using they should rinse them thoroughly in clean water, and perfectly dry them in the sun in summer and by the stove in winter.

The ideal dish cloth of the model household is clean, soft, white and medium sized. Turn table cloths are excellent to make into dish cloths. Take the worn out napkins, or the most worn parts from an old table cloth; ten inches square is a good size. Put two of these squares together and stitch across three or four times on the middle line. Then turn and repeat the same number of times across the other side. The result is a new cloth, and perfectly dry them in the sun in summer and by the stove in winter.

Without turning his head, the passenger proffered his five-cent piece.

"Ticket, sir!" said the conductor sharply.

"The passenger gazed at him blankly for an instant, then recognizing his blunder, he muttered, 'Ah, ah, I'm blind again!'" and politely began fumbling his hat for the receipt check which the conductor held ready to give him in return for the ticket.

But this man was not nearly so absent-minded as the Bostonian who met his own son down town, took off his hat in response to the young man's greeting, and in an abstraction, and said at his dinner table, "I'm blind again!"

"A young fellow down on Milk street laughed at me today when I answered his bow, and for the life of me I can't think who it could have been, though his face did seem familiar."—Youth's Companion.

Quincy March 5.

When are the flood disasters of 1889 to stop? This from Japan is the most appalling of any.

The Philadelphia Ledger calls on gentlemen of the navy to translate their "knots" into miles, to let the public know that 6 knots make 7 miles, and that when the Baltimore made 20.2 knots an hour, she traveled not quite 23 miles an hour.

President Harrison has given assurance that there is about him nothing of the Socialist or Nationalist, as the fashion is to call it in New England. He told the committee from the western waterways convention that while he was in favor of improved navigation to the utmost extent, yet he was firmly of opinion that the people along the Mississippi should build their own levees.

Nothing shows the advance in naval guns and ships so much as the case of the thirteen old monitors left over from our civil war. Twenty-five years ago they were considered almost invulnerable for coast defense. Their iron plates are five inches thick, and on the turrets eleven inches thick. Now a ball from an enemy's 6-inch gun could easily pierce their armor at a distance of several miles. The reason we have so little navy is because other nations have gone past us and left us.

Mr. Robert Ray Hamilton has been greatly pitted because he chivalrously married a woman, knowing her character to be of color, and then was systematically deceived by the woman, who lived in a constant row with him besides. But here is the view of it taken by a gray eyed little type-writer: "It served him right, and I don't pity him a bit. What did he want to marry a creature like that for, when there were so many nice women he could have got?" By the way, this story about Mr. Robert Ray Hamilton recalls a certain escapade in the life of his distinguished great-grandfather, Alexander Hamilton.

Growth of Catholicism.
Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, has called attention anew to the marvelous growth of the Roman Catholic church in the United States. A hundred years ago, in 1790, there were in the whole country only 40,000 Roman Catholics, including the priesthood, and only one college for the education of their ministry. There are now 9,000,000 belonging to that denomination, 8,000 clergymen, and 10,000 churches and chapels. There are 650 schools and academies for the higher education of the faithful, many hundred asylums, and lower schools without number.

A hundred years ago the 10th of November next the first bishop of the Roman church in this country was consecrated. He was Bishop Carroll, of Baltimore. The cardinal used these words further:

"I rejoice in the growth and progress of the Catholic religion, because I am convinced that the growth of the Catholic faith in this country will, more than any other means, promote the welfare and stability of our American institutions."

The United States and Canada.
There is no doubt but some measure must be taken in the matter of the commercial relations of the United States and Canada. There is a powerful and growing sentiment on both sides of the line in favor of freer trade in some shape between the two countries. Each wants what the other has to sell. In 1888 the imports into Canada from the United States were $9,000,000 greater than from Great Britain.

Joshua Quincy recently prepared a paper on the subject of trade between the two countries which states the case very clearly. He said there were three ways of securing freedom of trade. The first was by political union, making one vast country of the United States and Canada. That is not practicable at present certainly. Mr. J. H. Beadle, one of whose strong points as a newspaper writer is hard fact, in a tour of Canada during the summer found the annexation sentiment there comparatively feeble.

The second possible agreement mentioned by Mr. Quincy is commercial union, the maintenance of a common tariff by the two countries against all other countries, "and a common internal revenue system of taxation, with some equitable division of the receipts." This is the popular idea at present, perhaps, in both countries. But such a union would cripple the treaty making power of both countries with other countries. For instance, if the United States wished to conclude an agreement of amity and commerce with, say, Mexico, she would have to consult Canada, and thus the treaty making power of the president and senate would be impaired and our government shorn of its dignity and prestige. Again, if the United States wished to make the slightest change in her internal revenue laws, under commercial union it would be necessary to obtain the consent of the parliament at Ottawa to that change. This the people of the United States would not submit to.

The third kind of agreement seems to Mr. Quincy the only one that is desirable or possible. This is the treaty of reciprocity, "admitting some or all of the products of either country into the other free of duty." At a great meeting of New England manufacturers and merchants in Boston not long since, the sentiment was unanimous in favor of some kind of freer commercial intercourse.

A HOUSE FOR $985.45.

Plans and Estimates for the Building of a Seven Room Dwelling.

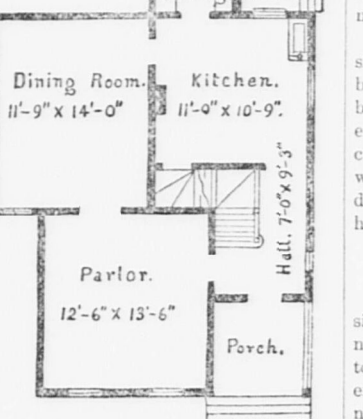

The following design and plans were furnished to Carpenter and Building by John M. Sherwood, a Syracuse, N. Y., architect. He calls attention to the following points: A glance at floor plans will show that a room or two can be easily added without any change of present house; there is a large cellar under the whole house, with stairs leading to the kitchen, on the first floor is a hall, with neat whitewood stained cherry staircase and doors leading into parlor and kitchen; the parlor, dining room and kitchen are good sized rooms; on the second floor are three chambers with closets off each, fitted up with wardrobe hooks, etc., and a spare closet for linen; there is a large closet over all.

An Artistic Group.

The small pointed wall bracket in this sketch, from The London Cabinet Maker, is intended to hold a staircase lamp, and could be produced in any of the popular art colorings. Below this is shown a simple form of stool; this, it will be seen, is designed upon the form of the old Pompeian seats, and hence it would not be inappropriate if produced in a metal finish, such as bronze, or even old gold. The mode of bracing the back and front legs together by means of the curved stretcher is elegant and strong. A wassail table, such as is shown at the side of this, would be a novelty just now, and, treated in the manner indicated, with two small shelves below, would be a useful as well as an attractive little ornament of drawing room furniture.

New Fashions in Funerals.

"Are you an undertaker?" asked a lawyer of a witness in court. "No, sir; I am a funeral director," was the reply. That is one of the latest fashions in funerals. The man of the hearse now calls himself a funeral director. Large funerals are going out, too, as an adept in the burying art observes, except "among the poorer classes and among foreigners." Where there used to be forty or more carriages at a prominent citizen's burial, there are now not more than from four to eight. The reasons for this seem based on common sense. The long ride to a burial ground, the standing upon the damp earth while the last services are performed, added to the nervous strain and excitement, sometimes cause serious and fatal illness.

Especially this has been noted in times when pneumonia was prevalent. The lamented Dr. George M. Beard attended the funeral of one of his friends who died of pneumonia. The weather was raw and damp. Dr. Beard went home, was seized with pneumonia, and died in a few days. His wife attended his burial. In a week she was carried off with the same disease.

For the same reason—considerations of health—men no longer stand about a grave with uncovered heads in bad weather. The tendency, moreover, is now for ladies not to go to burials at all. These are attended only by the male relatives of the family who are in sound health.

The strain on the nervous system and the dangers to the health of women make the sanitary reasons doubly strong in their case. Indeed, burials are often now conducted so privately that scarcely anybody is present at the actual interment except the undertaker's men.

When there are pallbearers, hired assistants carry the coffin, while the pallbearers walk beside them. The heavy burden of the coffin would frequently exhaust pallbearers completely, especially when they are old men. On the whole, all these modern changes seem dictated by a sensible regard for the health and comfort of the living.

Black and White.

The returns are all in from the expressions of opinion on the murder of an old negro and his daughter by white regulars at Lafayette, La. Almost without exception papers north and south denounce the atrocious outrage and cry for justice for those who cut the throat of a helpless girl. Southern papers generally call for the protection under the law of both races alike, and denounce both the outrage at Lafayette and that at East Point, Ga.

But in the midst of this come notes that ring an opposite tune. Senator Gibbs lately delivered in the Georgia senate a fiery speech on the negro question. Its echoes will certainly not die away till after the fall elections.

Senator Gibbs said the negro was useless, worthless and barbarous. He desired to help out of the Georgia all negroes, good laborers or otherwise. Freedom had destroyed their usefulness. The colored race had increased immensely in Georgia since the war, yet the products of that state had fallen off nearly one-half. He wanted foreign white immigration and desired the tax on emigrant agents repealed. It was necessary to get rid of the negroes. The lives of southern women were hemmed in and bound through fear of outrage. He expressed the opinion that the time would come long when the white people of the state would rise as one man and demand the emigration or extermination of the blacks. He concluded:

There is not room in this country for both the negro and the Yankee. Vast sums have been expended to educate negroes, who have never and will never do the state the least good; on the contrary, they are always ready at the call of the carpet bagger and his base southern ally to do her all the harm in their power.

The New York Press recently sent a circular letter to a number of members of the next congress asking whether, in their judgment, the number of members of the house of representatives should be increased after the next census. Seventy-five replies were received, the majority of them opposing a larger congress. The house is unduly crowded for room already, and the organization is so large as to be unwieldy, opponents of the increase say.

Mighty is rhetoric in the hands of Boulanger, the French renegade. He asked the suffrages of the French people because he "did not represent the personality depicted by his calumniators, but a national sentiment aspiring to throw off the burden of a growing debt and the intolerable inequities and humiliations to which the country is subjected." What American stump orator can beat that?

The legislative assembly of Hayti, with the bayonets of Hyppolite's soldiers at their throats, will shortly go through the farce of pronouncing the conqueror duly elected president. And maybe, then, there will not be a revolution in the black republic for six months.

There is at least one large hotel in America where, to the proprietor's credit be it spoken, tipping is absolutely forbidden, and means the discharge of any one found accepting a fee from a guest. It is in Chicago.

There is a call for an improved rifle for the armies of the nations, but exactly the right kind of gun has not yet been invented. The general opinion is in favor of a repeating rifle with small cartridges.

LIBERAL HOUSE FURNISHERS.

The People's Opportunity!

There are, no doubt, hundreds of people in New England who just at present are in want of something in our line, and who would gladly avail themselves of such an opportunity as we now offer if fully aware of the large savings that can be effected by embracing it. These we offer below some pointed facts and figures, remarking only that these figures are solely the result of cutting down profits, and that we do not wish them to be held as a permanent limit for the quantity of goods which they represent.

Why do we carry so many different styles? Because we wish to give our patrons the greatest facilities for making selections, and to have them feel they are not compelled to pay a dollar more than their own judgment tells them they can afford.

We do not confine ourselves to any particular class of goods, but carry all kinds, from the lowest price to the most expensive, in goods that are reliable, and will give satisfaction to the purchaser, and we sell everything to furnish a house complete.

You will find if you take the pains to investigate that not only do we sell goods the lowest, but that the style of goods we carry is better than any other house in New England can show.

We are noted among manufacturers of Carpets for our very extensive orders, often buying a thousand rolls at a dealer's price, and we sell our carpets cheaper than any other.

We will sell you enough goods to furnish four rooms in good taste and with nice goods, for $125, and will guarantee you that the same goods purchased elsewhere will cost you at least $150 to $175.

We deliver free to any Railroad Freight Depot in New England, and $100 or over we allow railroad fare for one person, both ways, and all our goods are warranted.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, OCT. 12, 1889.

For the Patriot.

Isabel.

BY L. F. N. BARNARD.

Read the bond that man has made.

No more tears are one.

Vain now is all earthly aid.

Day too soon is done.

Through the unseen space between.

Sky and sea, and clouds of shen,

Pierces cry of "Isabel."

Tell me, darling, is it well?

And, upon the o'er-creeping brain,

Seems to fall the sweet refrain.

"Dear one, is it well?"

No more days in pleasure spent.

Life seems all in vain.

Of the hopes that youth had lent.

Not one doth remain.

Close the tie that held them here.

May not she again appear?

Hear the cry of "Isabel."

Tell me, darling, is it well?

And, upon the o'er-creeping brain,

Seems to fall the sweet refrain.

"Dear one, is it well?"

Chide him not that in his grief.

He doth seek this slight relief.

Who shall call it vain?

Perhaps from some far-distant sphere.

Shine down, my love, and cheer.

To hear the cry of "Isabel."

Tell me, darling, is it well?

And, upon the o'er-creeping brain,

Seems to fall the sweet refrain.

"Dear one, is it well?"

Chide him not that in his grief.

He doth seek this slight relief.

Who shall call it vain?

Perhaps from some far-distant sphere.

Shine down, my love, and cheer.

To hear the cry of "Isabel."

Early Christian Idea of Woman.

The doctrine that the family is the unit of the state and of civilization was never handed down to us from the early Christians. It came from heathendom if it came from any source in particular. The contempt in which marriage and women were held in the first centuries of the church is shown in a paper in The Contemporary Review by Principal Donaldson, of the Scottish University of St. Andrews.

It is the prevalent opinion that woman owes her present position, such as it is, and some call it a high one, to Christianity and the influence of the Teutonic mind. Principal Donaldson says he used to believe this himself. Then he investigated it thoroughly and found that not only Christianity in the first three centuries did not free and elevate women, but that, "on the contrary, it tended to lower their character and contract their range of activity."

This, coming from a man so learned and so thoroughly Christian as Principal Donaldson, is a remarkable statement. The degradation of woman, however, does not come from anything Christ himself taught. Paul is responsible for it. The Ebionites narrate that Paul was a Greek of Tarsus; that he came up to Jerusalem and met and loved the high priest's daughter and became a Jewish proselyte. He then sought the high priest's daughter in marriage, but was rejected. This rankled in his soul ever after, so that he held a grudge at all womankind. Principal Donaldson says:

Some have thought that there is a bitterness against women in the writings of St. Paul which can be explained only by some such rejection as that related by the Ebionites.

At any rate, the writings of Paul gave a trend to the woman question in the first days of the Christian church that lowered and degraded women unspcakably, in the judgment of Principal Donaldson.

Great Columbia.

Retired United States Quartermaster General Meigs has been dipping at once into statistics and prophecy in a late number of Science. He has figured out of his head what the population of this republic will be in 1990.

Our people have nearly tripled in number in the forty years since 1850. It is to be considered that since the memory of men only now in the bloom and prime of manhood we have grown from 23,000,000 to 67,240,000, that being the estimate which Gen. Meigs makes for the 1890 census, which is the eleventh.

The year 1890 is the hundredth anniversary of the year when the population was taken. Then we had a population of not quite 4,000,000 all told. With what self complacency the Americans of 1890 must have looked back on the poor little 4,000,000 that our country held in 1790. Just so, if all goes well, the Americans of half a century hence will look back on us and on our insignificant 67,000,000, for in 1940 the country will have 283,822,877, and in 1990, at the same rate of increase, the population of the United States will be 1,308,562,348. At present the total population of the world is approximately supposed to be 1,400,000,000.

Gen. Meigs estimates our growth during the next century at 33.3 per cent. each decade, which is slightly less than it has been during the past century. Beyond a doubt the United States will be the head and home of the English speaking people on the globe. Russia might outstrip us in growth if she had a liberal government and a mild climate, her population being already 103,912,640. But as it is we have nothing to fear from Russia. We have only to stand fast together and march on to glory.

Thibet is a land invested with mystery and romance. There are fastnesses in its mountains that to this day have never been explored; retreats believed by some to be the home of Indian adepts who have conquered the infirmities of the flesh and of mortal mind, and who live on for centuries, like Bulwer's Zanoni. It is interesting to know that a Siberian traveler proposes to explore Thibet thoroughly and find out all that he can about it. He will be accompanied by a Chinese escort and take the route along by the Chinese wall. It is to be hoped he will finally be able to set at rest the question whether there are people in Thibet 500 years old.

The cultivation of vocal music in schools is an excellent method of preventing consumption. Good, strong, well developed throats and lungs will be able to resist the consumption spore that floats through the air and is breathed in. Especially is this true if the children are made to open their mouths freely and form words and syllables with the tip of the tongue, the lips and teeth, instead of back in the throat. By this means the harsh nasal tones complained of in the American voice will be completely avoided. Using the voice and lungs in the open air is a noble exercise for strengthening the chest.

There seem somehow to be mysterious natural forces that provide their own means of recovery after great disasters. In the awful floods at Johnstown, in Pennsylvania, from 6,000 to 9,000 lives were lost and $30,000,000 of property destroyed. Yet all this has not even delayed the industrial progress of the Conemaugh valley to an appreciable extent. The Cambria iron works, one of the most crippled of the wrecked establishments, has declared the usual semi-annual dividend, and the earnings of the railroads leading to that region are largely increased over last year.

fire dogs can be placed for the desired fire, and in this way large rooms are kept perfectly comfortable in cold weather without heat from any other source. These fireplaces are also provided with neat mantels constructed of ash.

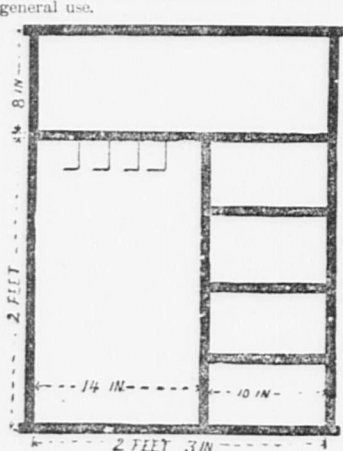

SECOND STORY.

The house is supplied with a cistern constructed with great care, the kitchen sink being supplied with water by a pump, and there is no more easy method of procuring good water for all purposes of the household.

A Kitchen "Dry Box."

A kitchen dry box is a small receptacle for drying scrub rags, scrub brushes and other kitchen articles of that character. It is a box which is fastened to the wall near the kitchen range. One inch auger holes are bored through its top and bottom and shelves, and thus there is a passage of warm air upward, through and out of the box at all times when there is heat in the kitchen range. In this way a great many unsightly articles, which naturally belong to the kitchen, may be put out of sight and at the same time be preserved in good condition. The front of the box is provided with a door. The cut shows an elevation or front of the box with the door open. On one side there are hooks. There is a shelf at the top and compartments on one side. Thus there may be complete classification and separation of articles in general use.

FRONT OF DRY BOX.

A drying box on this same principle may be constructed in which to place soap, a lock and key, and its top should have a two inch tin tube connection with kitchen flue, so that the soap suds may be drawn out of the room. In this way the soap would become very dry and hard, and could be more economically used. The advantage of having a convenient place for this material, which is so difficult to store in large quantities because of the odor which is attached to its presence, and will be appreciated. If soap were purchased by the box, placed in one of these drying receptacles, expense could be saved both on account of the reduction in cost of the original purchase and its more economical use because of its being hard and dry from being stored.

The dry box first mentioned is particularly attractive because of the air of neatness which it adds to a kitchen. It affords a convenient and proper place in which to put things. Articles which should be put in a dry box are commonly placed under a kitchen sink or in some out of the way place where they do not dry, and hence often become musty. If exposed to view they are unsightly; otherwise they are never dry.

Increasing the Burden of Living.

Very few people are fully aware of the difference in the amount of labor involved in caring for a modern house as compared to that which belonged to the smaller one. People of moderate income should, if they wish to be comfortable, have a compact house. It is true of such people, however, that they usually follow the lead of wealthy neighbors in the extravagant use of hall space, the classification of the house into a large number of rooms and a general spreading out in a way to largely increase the burden of living.

SHE DOTES ON SPIDERS.

A Queer Old Pennsylvania Woman Who Keeps a Roomful of Them.

A childless old couple live on a lonely cross road four miles southeast of Stoddardsville, Mo. She is a great hand for pet fowls and animals, but the strangest thing about her is her fondness for spiders. Harboring and looking after the welfare of a lot of spiders has been her hobby for a long time, and she says she has found a great deal of diversion and comfort in protecting and watching her peculiar pets. Years ago the old lady set apart a small bedroom for the insects to make their webs in, and from that day to this not a single web has been torn from the walls and ceiling. On the sides and overhead every inch of space is covered with the delicate work of the industrious spiders, and the one little window in the room is partially darkened by layer after layer of network over the panes. The numerous inhabitants of the mass of webs seem to dwell together in harmony, although the old woman declares that they often fight like cats and dogs. If the spiders happen to get into a snarl while she is in the room she pokes them around with a knitting needle, gives them a good scolding and makes them scamper into their respective homes of film. She calls them her straddlers. There are several varieties, and they are of various sizes and shades of color. Whenever the old lady enters the room and calls out to the insects in her squeaky voice, they dart from their hiding places and crawl out on the center of the webs. If any of them are slow in appearing she puckers up her lips and buzzes like a bee or a fly, and they hasten out to search for prey.

As soon as the visitor has won the old woman's good opinion, she becomes loquacious, candid and confidential. Then she will say that the window in the spider's headquarters has not been raised for more than twenty years, for opening it would ruin a lot of webs, and after that she will tell how she gets rid of flies during summer time. She drives the flies from the other rooms into the little bedroom and closes the door, and then, she says, she has jolly fun in staying in the room and seeing the horde of spiders hop out of their holes, and catch, torment and devour the imprisoned flies. Once in a while a bee or a wasp gets into the room and buzzes around until it tumbles into a web, and it amuses her to see how cunningly one of her spider pets will get around a wasp without being touched by its stinger.

Built out from one of the curves of the room like the shelf of a bracket there is a strong web toward which the old woman calls the visitor's attention. A big black spider comes tottering out of its hiding place at the old lady's command, and stops in the center of its web. She touches it with the end of a knitting needle, and it crawls around on the horizontal web for a while, and then goes lazily out of sight. The old woman has routed the spider out in order to let the visitor see it. It is a safe distance from the spider's dangerous tail, and for five minutes, the old lady said, it just sat there and calculated how it was going to get at the wasp's vitals without running foul of the sharp weapon that it was keeping an eye on. After the spider had been pondering for a good while, it suddenly arose on its very tip-toes, marched right up to the wasp's rear, and slowly straddled over the dangerous weapon, keeping its body so high that the stinger couldn't puncture it.

Still standing on its tip-toes directly above the wasp's middle, the spider quickly and dexterously applied its pinclers to the wasp's throat for a number of times, but the coat of mail was so hard and so tough that it was unable to make any impression on it. Then the spider straddled off, stood aside, and contemplated the wasp some more. Presently it proceeded to walk round and round the wasp, being very careful not to come in contact with the wasp's sharp end. After the spider had made a dozen circuits around its victim, the wasp's feet and legs were all tied up in a bunch. It couldn't wiggle them any more, and the spider again stepped to one side and intently gazed upon the wasp for three or four minutes. It seemed to be satisfied with the way it had fastened the wasp's legs, and the next thing it did was to grab the wasp by the head and back off with it to its hiding place in the wall.—Scranton (Pa.) A Bad Fight.

While riding in a Sixth avenue L. road train last evening I was more than astonished at the appearance of the conductor. His face presented that of a man scarcely 30 years, yet his neatly trimmed mustache and hair were snowy white. Between stations he told me his name was Arthur Chalmers. Four years ago, while in Baltimore, he attended a funeral, the interment taking place in the vaults of a church which had not been opened for years. The funeral was the opportunity he longed for, as he wanted to explore the place. Having provided himself with candle and matches, he remained behind to explore. The door had been closed and firmly fastened on the outside when the mourners and friends had departed, and he found himself a prisoner. The horrors of that night and next day, when he was released, turned his hair from jet black to its present snowy whiteness. Even now, Conductor Chalmers never likes to talk about his experience.—New York Star.

DORCHESTER TEMPLE CHURCH.

The corner stone of the new Dorchester Temple Baptist Church was laid Thursday, Oct. 3d, at four o'clock, with proper ceremonies. The new church, the foundation of which is now laid and the frame of which is up and mostly boarded in, is at the corner of Washington street and Welles avenue, fronting on both streets. The length of the building on Washington street is 97 feet and 9 inches, with a porte cochere extending to Welles avenue, of 17 feet. The Welles avenue length is 78 feet, 2 inches, and it runs back 61 feet, 8 inches, and the rear wall is 74 feet, 8 inches in length; on the Washington street side a tower rises to a height of 65 feet, surmounted by a graceful spire. A large vestibule on the same side of the building has broad entrances on both the right and left to the church. A broad porch and vestibule on the Welles avenue side make that front very attractive. The auditorium is 40 feet square, the platform being projected from the wall side opposite Washington street; back of this is the baptistry. Over that the organ loft and gallery for the choir. The vestry is 35 feet and 5 inches, by 40 feet and 4 inches. The pastor's room is between the vestry and the right of the desk, and is 10 feet, 8 inches, by 15 feet, 6 inches. There are two parlors, 16 feet, 3 inches, by 12 feet, 9 inches. The primary room is 17 feet, by 24 feet, 7 inches; the general class room is 17 feet by 11 feet. The height of the building is 44 feet, 10 inches. Every part of the building is amply lighted, and every room arranged in the most convenient manner for the uses to which they are to be put. Every inch of room is utilized. It will, when completed, be the most attractive church edifice in Dorchester, and one of the most beautiful modern buildings in Boston. It is expected to be ready for occupancy early next year, probably in January next.

The plans were drawn by Mr. Arthur H. Vinal, an architect whose fame is as broad as New England, and far beyond. His buildings stand as monuments of his genius and skill in nearly every city in New England, and when it is said that his talent has never been better displayed in a building of this cost than in this one, it will be understood that the plans on which this church are being built, are rare specimens of the master architect's genius. The society is to be congratulated upon securing the services of Mr. Vinal, who, taking into consideration all the circumstances and needs of the society, has planned an edifice adapted to them, and at the same time one of rare architectural beauty. The society was again fortunate in securing for a builder Mr. G. W. Oliver, who, entering heartily into the plans of the architect, to build a handsome and thoroughly substantial building, is carrying out in the minutest details the specifications furnished him. The materials used are of the best and most substantial; the work is being done in the most thorough and workmanlike manner, and Mr. Oliver takes a personal interest in the placing of every stick of timber, and the arrangement of every piece of finish. He is certainly the right man to whom to leave the erection of such a building. The cellar was built and the foundation laid by Mr. James A. King, the well known contractor on Washington street, which is equivalent to saying that the work has been well done, and reflects credit upon the contractor.

The society purchased 16,000 feet of land upon the corner of Washington street and Welles avenue, and the plans were drawn for the church. It was then found that as the land ran at an angle it would bring one corner of the edifice out on to Washington street. As the society did not feel able to purchase more land, Mr. Vinal, Mr. Oliver, Mr. King, and we believe one other gentleman, purchased a strip of land ten feet wide on Welles avenue, and gave it to the society, thus enabling them to build the church as originally intended, without change of plans, allowing ten feet of land between the church and the street lines on both Welles avenue and Washington street. Ground was broken for the church on July 4th, last. The progress made upon it since has been rapid. The structure is to cost when completed, $20,000.

Thursday afternoon October 3d, the laying of the corner stone was accomplished with proper ceremonies, of which the following is a brief report:—Music. Prayer by Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D. Opening address by Deacon George W. Chipman. Address by Rev. R. J. Adams, D. D. Address by Rev. D. B. Jatten, D. D. Address by Rev. J. E. Haynes, D. D. Reading of the record of the contents of the box to be placed beneath the corner stone. Laying of the corner stone. Music. Closing words and benediction by the Rev. W. H. Eaton, D. D. There was a very large attendance at the exercises. Just opposite this church, on the corner of Welles avenue and Washington street, is to be built the new Pierce school house, which, when built, will wonderfully improve the looks of this neighborhood. —Dorchester Volunteer.

Impressions of Bermuda.

The first impression the island makes upon one is that he is walking in a beautiful and well-kept park, the roads are so hard and smooth and clean, and the tropical vegetation is such as may sometimes be seen in the parks and gardens of wealthy proprietors who own their greenhouses, and in summer use their contents for garden decoration. We can and by preference do walk in the middle of the roads without soiling shoes or garments. These roads are made of the coral rock which makes the island. The rock is broken, the larger pieces form the foundation, and upon the top is put softer and more finely pulverized rock and then the work is smoothed over and left to the action of the weather. The rain falls upon the surface and dissolves a portion of the rock and makes with it a cement which covers the road with a hard, smooth surface. Yet the whole remains porous enough to quickly absorb the hardest rain, so that half an hour after a severe rainstorm one can walk anywhere with the greatest comfort. The houses of the people are of stone. I think I have not seen half a dozen wooden buildings during my stay. Even the roofs of the houses are of stone. The effect upon one who for the first time sees all the houses built of stone, with their stone roofs sloping up from the four sides and the whole white-washed so white as to be trying to the eyes, is difficult to describe. The poorest of the people live in stone houses as well as the rich, the difference being in size and not in solidity. When a man wishes to build a house he finds his stone while he is excavating his cellar. He saws it out with just such a saw as a lumberman would saw a log with. He can easily saw it into any shape he desires, and after his stone is cut into blocks of the desired size and shape, it hardens under the influence of the sun and rain. When his house is built, he cements it all over with Portland cement, and whitewashes it, to make the stone waterproof. The roofing is of the same stone cut into slabs about two inches thick, and it is laid on rafters, the stone shingles overlapping the slabs.

I might go on to describe many other things about the houses and grounds of the people which are of constant interest to the visitor. But let me pass on to say that the uniform courtesy of the people is very noticeable and very pleasing. Even the little children always have a pleasant salutation as you pass them. Visitors are welcome to go almost anywhere, and to do almost anything without being molested.

The one thing which is disappointing is the absence of native fruit, such as almost all visitors expect to find in this climate. Oranges grow here, but there are only a few persons who cultivate the better varieties. The orange produced here is generally bitter, but one can buy a few native oranges at six or eight cents apiece, which are as good as one could wish. Bananas grow in great profusion, and though they are smaller in size than those we are accustomed to in America, they make up in flavor what they lack in size. The papaw is eaten by the natives, and is found on sale; but I think one accurately described the taste of this fruit when he said he would as soon eat a piece of squash.

The climate is delightful, the temperature ranging between sixty degrees and seventy-five degrees at this season of the year. There are days when the humidity is very great, but the average humidity is lower than most places which are the resort of health-seekers. General Russell Hastings, who keeps the record for the United States signal service, has published a comparative statement based upon official reports which he has received from the signal service in Washington, in which he shows that at both temperature and humidity the Bermuda Islands are more favorable for invalids than any point in the United States. And yet it is not a good climate for those who have lung or throat troubles. For nervous troubles and for over-worked brains, it is just the place for rest. —New York Ecologist.

ONE WAY TO CARRY A BABY. A gentleman who was walking through East street yesterday morning saw a sight which amused him very much, and he related the incident as follows: "A man and his wife came down the street, one carrying a bouncing baby and the other what looked like a ten-quart milk pail. The man had the child and had become tired of holding it. He took the pail from his wife and put the child into it. Then she took hold of one side of the pail and off they trudged with the weight of the child divided between them." —New Haven Palladium.

TO BE REMOVED. The removal of the great monolith, the Goddess of Water, from the ancient Mexican city of Teotihuacan, is attracting widespread attention among scientific men. The top of the statue is below the surface of the surrounding plain, and as it is over ten feet lower, it is seen that the task of its removal is no ordinary one. It is of granite, contains 262 cubic feet of solid rock. Its weight is estimated at twenty-five tons. A temporary railroad track nearly three miles long will be laid from the station on the Mexican railway over to the place where the statue now stands. Its age is supposed to be about 1,400 years. —Chicago Herald.

A COSTLY SOMBRERO. A citizen of Atlanta, Ga., wears a sombrero which cost him $6000. He bought a copper mine in Mexico for $6000 some years ago, and also a sombrero and a big pair of boots in which to superintend mining operations. The mine yielded no profit and was abandoned, and the Georgian returned with the sombrero and boots as the result of his venture. The boots were worn out long ago and the sombrero is all that he has now to show for the $6000.

UNWELCOME EMIGRANTS. Advice from Honolulu says Hawaiian Islanders are becoming seriously alarmed at the constant arrivals of Chinese laborers.

It is estimated that there are 16,000 Chinese now on the islands out of a total population of 80,000. There are nearly half as many Chinese as native Hawaiians and they have monopolized all the industries formerly given up to natives.

It is reported that the Chinese authorities have in contemplation the expulsion from that country of all Americans in Chinese employ. As there are comparatively few such employes this would not cause much anxiety, but if American merchants and missionaries are also to be put under the ban, as has been intimated, it at once becomes a much more serious matter. However, we cannot blame the Chinese for resorting to retaliatory measures, since we have given them ample provocation.

A BUSY WOMAN. There is a woman in New York who is an author, a doctor, an artist and an actress. After breakfast in the morning she spends a couple of hours over the manuscript of the story or essay which she has been employed to write. From ten to two she practices medicine and receives patients in her office. She next works at her easel as a painter till six, and makes pictures for which she finds buyers. After dinner and an hour's rest she betakes herself to a theater, where she plays the light part for which she may be set down in the cast. Besides all, she is a mother, knows how to make her own clothes, and understands how to use her income from all her professions. And yet there are men in New York who talk of the inferiority of the female sex as compared with their own. —New York Sun.

THE RICHEST TRIBE. The Osage tribe of Indians is said to be the richest nation in the world. The tribe numbers 1501 men, women and children. They have in the United States Treasury $7,758,094 of their own money, drawing five per cent. interest. But beside this they have 1,470,000 acres of land, equal to just about 1000 acres apiece. This land would sell for $10 an acre, or $10,000 for each individual portion. This makes each Indian worth $15,171. This wealth is a curse to them and the tribe is dying out.

NEVER PATENTED. It is said that the common cow-catcher attachment to locomotives is about the only article of universal use that was never patented. Its inventor was D. B. Davies of Columbus, who found his model in the plow. Red lights on the rear of trains, it is further said, were adopted at the suggestion of the late Miss Swisshelm, after a railway accident in which she had a narrow escape.

STORM SIGNAL. A huge lamp, visible as far as the Narrows, has been placed on the top of the Equitable Building in New York city. It is 225 feet above sea level, and 75 feet above the building's roof. It is expected to be of great use in giving storm signals at night. Under the lamp is a small tower, which is an instrument shelter.

CANNOT SUSPEND. Railroads once started cannot suspend even if there is a loss in continuing. This is the decision rendered by Judge Love of the Federal court of Iowa, a small railroad company having applied to the court for an order to have the road suspended on the ground that it didn't pay expenses. This is hard on stockholders, but it's very pleasant for small backwoods towns and villages.

The County of Custer, in Montana, is the largest county in the United States. It contains 13,569,929 acres, and is 150 miles long and 125 miles wide. It is a place of historic interest, containing, as it does, the site of the great battle of the Little Big Horn, where Custer and his forces were massacred.

There is no accounting for taste. A man who was hanged in Minnesota last week sold his body in advance to a physician for $10, the money, according to a despatch from Morehead, "to be given to a young woman for whom he had a high regard."

Miss McCormick, who has married Emmons Blaine, is supposed to have $2,000,000, as Cyrus McCormick left $15,000,000 to be equally divided between his widow and five children. Miss McCormick received $2,500,000 at the time of the division, but it has now increased to $3,000,000.

THE WEATHER FOR SATURDAY.

Blue Hill, Minn.,
Friday, Oct. 19, 2 P. M.
Indications for Saturday: Fair and slightly cooler.

Mock City Council.

Were all the meetings of the City Council as interesting as the mock session held in the Unitarian Chapel Wednesday, the Council chamber would have to be enlarged to accommodate the public, but it would be a paying investment to the city at a dollar a ticket. Let the honorable body consider this, that if they can be funny. The "preludes" at 7.45 for the mock City Council is noted did not materialize on this occasion, the curtain rising several minutes late. The cast was as follows:

President—James H. Slade.
Messengers—James H. Slade, Jr.
City Solicitor—F. A. Clifton.

Christopher Columbus, W. A. Simmons.
George Washington, Theophilus King.
Victor Hugo, William B. Rice.
Charles Dickens, Emory L. Crane.
Julius Caesar, Dr. W. L. Faxon.
William Shakespeare, Dr. W. L. Faxon.
Daniel Webster, Edwin W. Marsh.
Napoleon Bonaparte, E. H. Dowson.
Henry Clay, Charles T. Baker.
Great Scott, F. E. Hall.
Olive Crawford, J. A. Nelson.
Holy Moses, John A. Duggan.

The roll call showed eleven of the twelve members to be present. As seven was a quorum the question at once arose whether the number must be reduced. The city solicitor decided four were more than sufficient, but "spelled" the others.

Some notable petitions were presented from each ward. Ward One wanted a brass monument erected to the temperance apostle. Ward Two wanted a brass monument erected to the temperance apostle. Ward Three wanted a brass monument erected to the temperance apostle. Ward Four wanted a brass monument erected to the temperance apostle. Ward Five wanted a brass monument erected to the temperance apostle.

There were exhaustive reports from committees, notable that relative to the collection of garbage. A communication from the Mayor was received with much reverence.

If the audience were inclined to think that the regular meetings of the Council are as ludicrous or undesirable they should attend one of the mock sessions. They are in fact conducted with much dignity, but are often quite interesting.

Commitment Barker.

The death of Mr. George A. Barker on Wednesday evening, following an illness of three months after the decease of his much respected father, was a sad blow to his devoted wife and loving children, his aged mother and a large circle of friends. He had been dangerously ill for some weeks, and it was a relief to his family and friends that he had passed peacefully.

The deceased was a native of Quincy, and would have been forty-nine years of age yesterday. He was an active member of the firm of H. Barker & Sons, granite quarriers and manufacturers, which was one of the first to open a quarry in Quincy. He was adverse to holding public office because it would take him from his family. In 1881, however, he was prevailed upon to take the Republican nomination for Representative from the Fifth Norfolk District and was handsomely elected. Last fall at the first city election he was chosen a Councilman, and was one of the members of the association.

He was married in 1875, and leaves a widow and two children.

His funeral took place at 9 P. M. Friday from his late residence on Greenfield street. The services were conducted by the Rev. D. M. Wilson, and were very largely attended by relatives, friends and city officials, the City Council being present in a body. The interment was at Mount Wollaston.

Royalty Entertained.

Wednesday morning's Herald had the following dispatch from Fort Payne, Ala.: "The party of New England capitalists and investors arrived here yesterday afternoon and were received with a salute of guns and bands of music. The party numbers 162, and includes representative men from all parts of New England. They were hospitably entertained at the DeKalb and Marlboro hotels, the latter house being opened last night for the first time, while the formal opening of the DeKalb was observed by a banquet and grand display. Bristle New England guests are present from Birmingham, Chattanooga, Cincinnati, Kansas City and other points west and south. Col. J. W. Spaulding and lady, formerly of Portland, Me., led the grand march to the city hall. Other prominent guests are Secretary of State Henry B. Pierce, ex-Speaker W. G. Gillison of Providence, R. L. Barker of D. Young of Boston, W. P. Rice of Kansas City, Mayor Godfrey of Fort Payne, Ala. Fully 200 couples were on the floor. The new hotel, under the management of W. V. Bursell, has over 100 rooms, and is the finest hotel in Alabama. The whole city is in holiday array. The New England party visit the iron works today, the coal mines tomorrow, and leave for Denison, Tex., Thursday."

IN MEMORIAM. The death of Mrs. Charlotte L. Nightingale, which occurred at one on Quincy street, Thursday, has brought sorrow to a large circle of relatives and friends. Mrs. Nightingale was a loving mother, a kind friend, and a good neighbor. She had been an invalid for a long time, but the devoted attention and care of her daughters have smoothed and comforted her many hours of sufferings.

WOLLASTON.

Work on Whitwell began this week.

The building of the City Hospital is well under way.

Registration for the State election closes next Saturday evening at 10 o'clock.

Clapp Bros. have an eye for the beautiful dress goods and children's cloakings, etc.

The Granite Clothing Co. are offering great bargains in children's suits and overcoats.

Miss Mary J. Gibson left last week for Albany where she is enjoying a pleasant visit.

John W. Lombard will auction household furniture on Wednesday next, on Water street.

Dr. Faxon is seeking signatures to a petition asking the Legislature to incorporate a sewer company.

The Boston Branch Shoe Store comes to the front this week with a brand new sign of black with large gilt letters.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Goodridge of this city, attended the dedication of the new soldier's monument at Nashua, N. H., on Tuesday.

Rt. Wm. H. O'Farrell, District Deputy of the 24th Masonic district, will make an official visit to Fort Lynde next Thursday evening.

J. F. Holmes, of Brockton, opened a very successful dancing class in Robertson Hall, Wednesday, between sixty and seventy pupils being present.

Mr. George S. Bass and family who have been sojourning at their summer house on Great Hill, Houghs Neck, have returned to winter quarters.

Mr. Henry H. Hunt and sister, Miss Annie, left Thursday for their winter home in St. Augustine, Fla. They sailed from Boston on the City of Macon.

The event of the coming week will be the Red, White and Blue party at Faxon Hall, on Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Woman's Relief Corps.

The Telephone Company has run three metallic circuits between Quincy and Boston, and the service between these points is again satisfactory. All trunk lines will be similarly treated.

The Quincy Musical Club have secured Russell's studio for their club room and are now expecting pretty things from their lady friends to make the room look attractive and homelike.

Mr. H. Faxon's Rocket made an enviable record in regatta this year. She started in twenty-six; was first in thirteen, second in six, third in four, fourth in one, disabled in one, and withdrew from the other.

The sloop yacht, Adolph, which is owned by Mr. Henry Moebs of Boston Highlands, dragged her anchor and was driven ashore nearly opposite the Linden House during the late gale. Fortunately she was not much damaged.

Friday, October 18th, was the anniversary of the birth of Mr. Thomas Crane, and his portrait, which hangs in the Thomas Crane Library, was prettily decorated with autumn leaves. Mrs. Crane, who usually visits meeting was called of those interested in forming a Baptist Church, and a sufficient number responded to warrant the same. April 1st, 1886, services were first held in a hall near the Point bridge, which had been fitted up for church worship, and two weeks later a Sunday school was organized of forty-five members. The church was not formally established until Feb. 23, 1887, and in 1888 was received into the Boston Baptist Association. In 1889, Rev. Daniel Stone of Concordville was chosen pastor, and labored faithfully until his death in May of the following year.

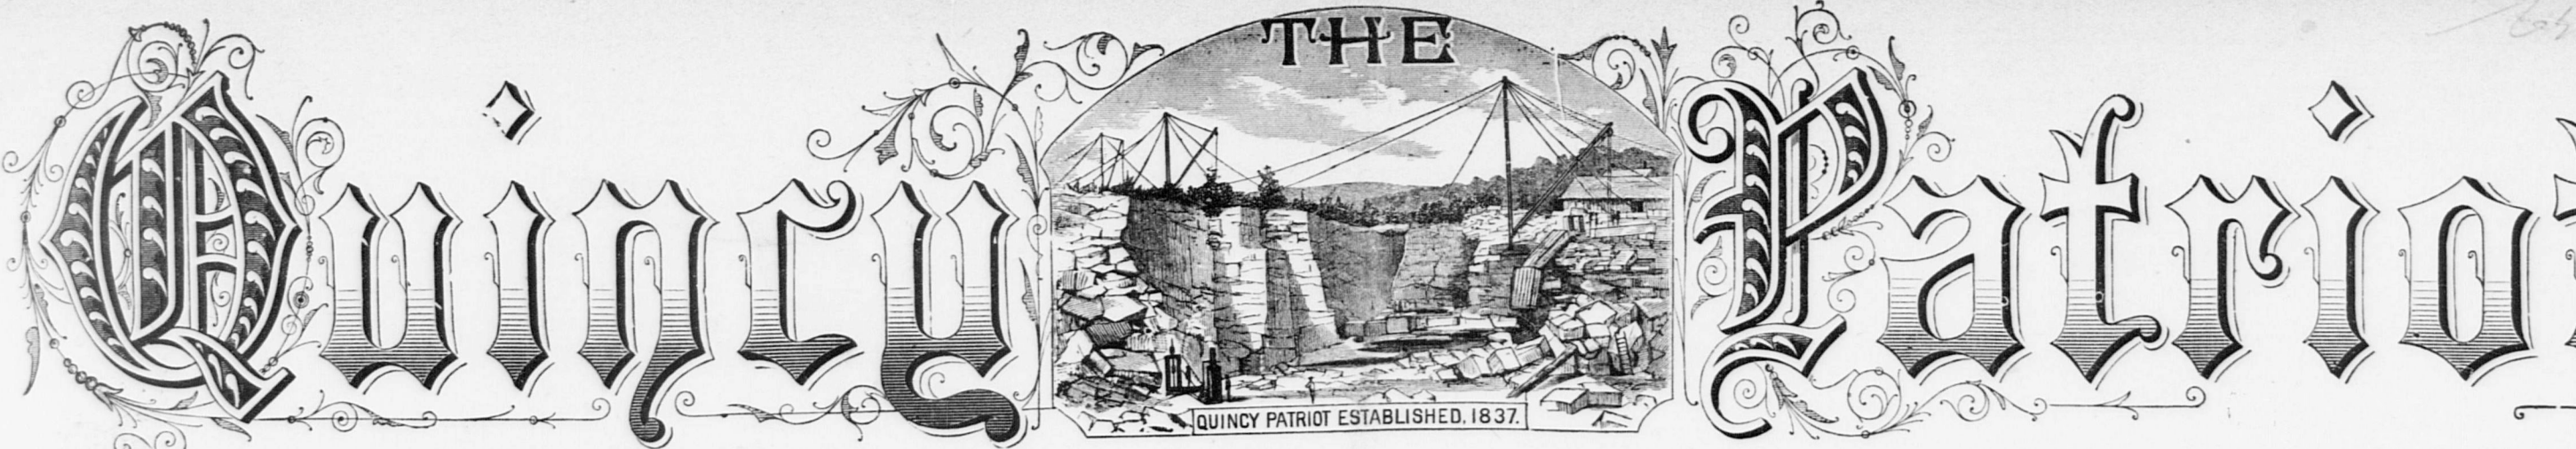

The succeeding pastors were as follows: Rev. W. M. Mott, Rev. Lewis Colby, Rev. G. B. Williams, Rev. Chas. H. Hickok, Rev. Geo. W. Lawton, Rev. Chas. W. Williams, Rev. I. N. Allen and Rev. Wm. Spencer.

On November 3, 1879, during the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Lawton, the church voted to build a chapel, which was completed and dedicated Aug. 19, 1880.

Oct. 4, 1889, a meeting of the difficulty was called, and on account of the difficulty the church has had in membership it was voted to disband. The trustees were instructed to give the keys and all rights of the church to the Baptist State Convention. Rev. Mr. Spencer has accepted a call to Wilmington, Vt., and leaves today with his family, to take up his work at that place. On Tuesday evening some fifty of his friends assembled at his home on Winter street to bid him good-bye. After an excellent supper, served by the ladies, Mr. Arthur W. Newcomb presented Mr. Spencer with $25.00 in behalf of his former pastor. Mr. Spencer returned his thanks and informed his friends that he had also been the recipient of a check for $50.00 from Mr. M. C. Dier of East Weymouth. (Mr. Dier is connected with the Baptist Church, Weymouth Landing). Mr. Spencer also received many other gifts, which he presented to the church. He has many friends, who wish him great success in his new field of labor.

Rev. Mr. Benedict exchanged pulpits on Sunday last with Rev. H. L. Slack of Bethel, Connecticut. On account of the storm but few assembled, but those who did were rewarded by an excellent sermon. Free Delivery.

It was in September, 1888, over a year ago that Postmaster Spear petitioned the post office authorities for free delivery. Other petitions followed, and in March last an inspector visited Quincy, to see what Quincy was entitled to free delivery, that the business people of the Centre and South Quincy wanted it, and he said he would report favorably and that by July 1st he should have the improvement. July came and went but free delivery is apparently as far off as ever. Congressmen Morse has recently been enlisted in the cause and the following correspondence will throw a new light upon the question.

CANTON, Mass., Oct. 21, 1889.

Editor Quincy Patriot.
Dear Sir:—The enclosed letter from the Postmaster General will explain any delay that may occur in making a free delivery post office at Quincy. The Department cannot put the system in force to the satisfaction of the people without a recommendation from the Postmaster General.

Yours truly,
EDWARD A. MORSE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 18, 1889.

Mr. E. A. Morse, Canton, Mass.
Dear Sir:—Referring to your recent call regarding the office at Quincy, Mass., I beg to say that we are waiting to be informed that the additional room is ready, that is necessary for the introduction of the free delivery system. When the inspector visited Quincy, he understood that an association of citizens was prepared to furnish suitable buildings. The delay is no delay when proper quarters are furnished.

Yours truly,
JOHN W. MARKER,
Postmaster General.

Not only does the correspondence throw new light on the subject, but there is evidently a misunderstanding. When Postmaster Spear petitioned he was paying the cost of the Quincy office out of his salary, and it was his intention to enlarge the present quarters with the advent of free delivery. Since that time the government has decided to allow second class offices for rent, fuel, light, etc., etc. It would seem, therefore, that it was clearly the duty of the government to hire more commodious quarters or increase Postmaster Spear's allowance that he may enlarge the present office.

The business men's Association of Quincy has entered actively into this matter and solicited the Postmaster General to come to the understanding that said association was to furnish a building. Why should the government expect to have buildings furnished for a second class office? Will the Congressman please set the Postmaster General right.

Some idea of the amount of business transacted may be gleaned from the following item:

The Postmaster General ordered a count and weight of all first, third and fourth class matter dispatched from the post office in Quincy on October 22 and Wednesday of this week, not including matter in transit from Quincy Point. Following is the result:

Letters, 1624; postals, 222; third-class, 62; fourth-class, 15.

This with an estimate of 150 pieces of second-class, not included in the count, would make a total of 2077 pieces dispatched in the two days.

Are Quincy Fares Excessive?

Passengers on railroads are often heard to complain of excessive fare, and to argue that they buy the car in Monday's Herald there was an interesting summary of the suburban fares from all the railroads centering in Boston, from which is gleaned the following compilation of fares for stations eight miles distant from "the Hub."

Quincy, Old Colony, 15 100

East Milton, Old Colony, 14 110 8.50

Mattapan, Old Colony, 15 100 8.00

Hyde Park, Old Colony, 15 100 9.00

Spring Street, Old Colony, 15 100 9.00

Middle Highlands, B. & M. 15 120 9.50

Weymouth, B. & M. 15 120 8.50

Waverly, Lowell, 12 100 8.25

Newtonville, B. & A. 15 120 9.25

Newton Centre, B. & A. 17 140 9.75

Newton Highlands, B. & A. 19 158 10.45

Watertown, Fitchburg, 12 100 8.75

Chenais Brook, Fitchburg, 15 120 9.50

Hyde Park, N.Y. & N.E., 20 120 11.00

*Fare on workmen's train $21.60 annually.

100 rides for $5.

Quarterly.

It will be observed that but three of the fifteen places quoted have a cheaper single fare.

Eight hundred percent rise for less money, Mattapan on the same railroad, paying thirty-five cents less. Six points are better favored on 100 ride tickets.

It is an interesting phase of the matter that Quincy is on the whole below the average. But it might be argued that Quincy is a more important station than any of those quoted, and probably receives a larger revenue, and that it should for these reasons have the lowest fares.

Has he Bought a Tall Hat?

It strikes us that the junior officer of the "Patriot" is achieving honors fast in the "New South." One of his fellow travelers forwards us the Daily Herald of September, Tex., in which appeared the following item:

*Judge Prescott, of the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, is another visiting journalist. He comes from the land of the Adames and the home of the great Faxon, who makes more trouble for the g. o. p. in Massachusetts than Rutland Johnson or Col. Cranfill, do for the Texas democracy.

It is an interesting phase of the matter that Quincy is on the whole below the average. But it might be argued that Quincy is a more important station than any of those quoted, and probably receives a larger revenue, and that it should for these reasons have the lowest fares.

City Hall Chitchat.

The election officers will be invited to meet at the ward room in City Hall, Wednesday evening to acquaint themselves with the Australian system. The room has been raised off and the paraphernalia is in position.

An interesting and important meeting of the City Council may be expected on Monday evening.

Commissioner Richard has received notice from Edward Nutter that he intends to build on Liberty street, Parker's building, from Edward Lennon on the same street.

Mrs. Hattie Dickey has opened her millinery parlors on South Main street, and would be pleased to have the ladies call, and she will endeavor to do her work satisfactorily.

It would be well for Quincy people to inform their correspondents of their street number and have their letters so directed, and thus be ready for free delivery when it comes.

J. D. Taber will open the salmon for sale on Thursday evening at A. E. Nash on Temple street today as an oyster and lunch room, where he will furnish oysters by the plate or quart opened fresh every day.

Cards are out for the wedding of Miss Annie Adams, daughter of Mr. Adams, to Mr. Charles Edson White, which will take place in the Old South Church, Oct. 31, next Thursday at 8 p. m.

The demand for the PATRIOT the past few weeks is without precedent, and although the number has been increased, the supply is quickly exhausted.

The circulation is now 2500 copies weekly.

The regular annual meeting of the Adams Academy Alumni Association will be held at the Academy building next Wednesday, Oct. 30th, at 12.30 p. m. All who have been connected with the school are cordially invited to attend.

At the Unitarian parish meeting held Monday evening, the music committee was instructed to engage a leader. The other affairs including one relative to the curbing around the grounds, were indefinitely postponed.

Seventeen hundred dollars deposited to the credit of the fountain from the Mock City Council. The expenses are not yet met, but are small. A business meeting of the Quincy Village Improvement Society for the election of officers, etc., will soon be called.

The handsome bronze figure of flying Mercury at the Thomas Crane Public Library was presented to the library by the late Mrs. C. F. Adams, through her son, Mr. Charles Adams. It is quite an ornament and much admired by the patrons of the library.

Curiosity has drawn many to the "Japanese village" in Hancock Hall this week, where they have witnessed the skillful manipulations of a "Jap" jeweler, a potter, and an artist who shows three colors on his brush. The wedding was private, only the immediate friends of the party being present. The parlor was handsomely draped in floral blossoms and sunnys and the bride appeared in a becoming costume.

Abbie Nottage and Mr. F. Dane acted as bridesmaid and best man. The Rev. H. B. Smith officiated and following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served. At the tables were seated ex-Mayor R. Fitcher and others. The presents were numerous and costly.

The parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Nottage were formerly residents of Quincy.

QUINCY EXCURSIONISTS. Thursday afternoon a party of special car Quincy people left Boston by the new route to the Pacific coast. They will stop en route at Chicago, Omaha, Denver, and other points. Among the number were ex-Representative E. B. Pratt and Mrs. Pratt, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Rice and Miss Rice, Mrs. Frank Faxon and Miss Faxon, Mr. H. M. Faxon, and Mr. L. S. Anderson. They will be absent a month.

FIRE. The large stable 50x75 connected with the Rockland House at Nantasket was burned last Sunday night; loss $8000.

Mr. Wilson Tisdale of this city had several barges, harnesses, etc., stored there, most of which were saved.

The Herald says: Gunners are having very good sport in Hingham this fall. The woods are fairly well stocked with quail and partridges, and these birds are found for sale in the provision stores. About a dozen wild geese have been shot on Accord pond, and a few black ducks; but the latter are not so plentiful as in former years.

If your grocer has never heard of Brussels soap, give him no peace until he orders some. It is not adulterated.

WEST QUINCY.

An alarm from Box 40 shortly after five Wednesday morning called the fire department to the West Quincy house on Copeland street, where a fire had made considerable progress in the partitions. Large quantities of water was put into the building before the flames were subdued, but the loss on building, which is owned by Mr. F. J. Fuller, will be only $800. Landlord Clare lost $100 or more on furniture, mostly by water. The fire probably caught in the partition between the dining room and kitchen from some unknown cause. Both gentlemen were insured.

Mr. Henry F. Scott, wife and two children of Pawtucket, R. I., are guests of Mrs. J. H. Nutting.

Mrs. James Fletcher was threatened with a fever this week.

Singularly petitions were started about the same time at each end of Cemetery street for a change in name. The "Park streets" are better pleased with Crescent street proposed by Mr. Badger. May the petition be granted is also the wish of many not residents of the street.

Did it ever occur to the readers of the PATRIOT that the names of most of the prominent streets of West Quincy connect with C. There is Copeland, Cemetery, Cross, Common and Centre, and now when it is proposed to change the name of one that must also begin with the same letter.

William Gragg and a gang of men are paving the way for widening Common street, commencing at Copeland street.

A pleasing harvest concert was given by the Methodist Sunday School last Sunday evening, consisting of recitations, solo, class exercises. The decorations were not as elaborate as on similar occasions in past years. There was however, a pretty display of flowers, both indoors and out.

The harvest supper Tuesday evening was a decided success, and no one could say he did not receive a "square meal."

Two well known young people were united in marriage Wednesday morning at the St. Marys Church, Mr. John Hussey and Miss Maggie White, daughter of James N. White. Rev. F. A. Frigiglietti officiated. Mr. John R. White was groomsmen and Miss Mary White the bridesmaid.

In the evening there was a reception at the residence of the bride's parents.

Much fault finding is heard, because the street railway company do not fill in between the rails. Copeland street is in the business section, is so narrow that it is often necessary for carriages to enter the rails.

Patrick Shelvin of West Quincy, while attempting to load a barrel of dynamite on Monday, was run over and killed. He was unmarried.

Houses Entered.

Burglars evidently intend to ransack the whole village Sunday night from the number of places they visited. At only one were they to any degree successful, and that was at the residence of ex-Lord Commissioner Cashman, on Cross street, where a watch valued at $80 and $20 in money were secured. Henry Coran's residence was entered by a back door, but only $20 taken. At S. B. Little's the handle was knocked off the safe, but the rogues were evidently frightened away before doing further damage. A blind was opened at Charles H. Fitch's, D. H. Fitzgerald's residence was entered by a door opening on to the roof of a shed, but here they were frightened away by dog. A mysterious person was seen around the residence of Samuel Ames at about early hour in the morning, who when pursued ran toward Brainerd.

Masonic Visitation.

Rev. Henry O. Fairbanks, District Deputy of the 24th Masonic District, made an official visit to Rural Lodge of Quincy on Thursday evening. Mr. Fairbanks, Francis E. Shaw, Master of Paul Revere Lodge of Brockton, G. S. W. W. Osborne of G. W. J. W. of Hall as G. S. J. M. Cutting as G. T. and Charles W. Brabury as G. M. D. H. Fitzgerald, 100 members and nearly as many visiting brethren present, the following being some of the lodges represented:

Union of Dorchester, Norfolk Union of Randolph, Puritan of Weymouth, Weymouth, Paul Revere of Brockton, John Cutler of Abington, King Philip, St. George of Campello, Amity of Danvers, George Warren, King Solomon, Puritan, Mr. Lebanon of Andover, Bethel, Baalbe, Massachusetts, Fraternal, Atlantic, Letland, Washington and others.

A very creditable exemplification of the work was given by Worshipful Master C. C. F. and his subordinate officers. A supper in Robertson hall by Landlord Nash of the Robertson House was the closing feature.

M. C. O. F.

A lodge of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, to be known as Quincy Court, No. 73, was organized in Red Men's Hall, Thursday evening by High Chief Ranger L. G. Fennessey and suite of Boston. The following officers were elected:

Chief Ranger—John H. Dinegan.

Vice Chief Ranger—Conrad Mischler.

Recording Secretary—Henry A. Talbot.

Financial Secretary—W. W. McNamary.

Treasurer—John A. McDonnell.

Senior Conductor—Michael Manning.

Junior Conductor—James P. McGovern.

Inside Sentinel—Murdock Morrison.

Outside Sentinel—John Dexter.

Trustees—Dr. S. M. Donovan, Timothy Keefe, P. J. Cuniff.

The workings of this beneficial order are well known to residents of Quincy, as there has been a flourishing court in West Quincy since the first of the new court will meet the first and third Thursdays.

Dance—Nottage.

The Nashua (N. H.) Daily Gazette of this week, announces the marriage of Miss Caroline Nottage to Mr. Herbert F. Dane both well known residents of that place.

The wedding was private, only the immediate friends of the party being present. The parlor was handsomely draped in floral blossoms and sunnys and the bride appeared in a becoming costume.

Abbie Nottage and Mr. F. Dane acted as bridesmaid and best man. The Rev. H. B. Smith officiated and following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served. At the tables were seated ex-Mayor R. Fitcher and others. The presents were numerous and costly.

The parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Nottage were formerly residents of Quincy.

QUINCY EXCURSIONISTS. Thursday afternoon a party of special car Quincy people left Boston by the new route to the Pacific coast. They will stop en route at Chicago, Omaha, Denver, and other points. Among the number were ex-Representative E. B. Pratt and Mrs. Pratt, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Rice and Miss Rice, Mrs. Frank Faxon and Miss Faxon, Mr. H. M. Faxon, and Mr. L. S. Anderson. They will be absent a month.

FIRE. The large stable 50x75 connected with the Rockland House at Nantasket was burned last Sunday night; loss $8000.

Mr. Wilson Tisdale of this city had several barges, harnesses, etc., stored there, most of which were saved.

The Herald says: Gunners are having very good sport in Hingham this fall. The woods are fairly well stocked with quail and partridges, and these birds are found for sale in the provision stores. About a dozen wild geese have been shot on Accord pond, and a few black ducks; but the latter are not so plentiful as in former years.

If your grocer has never heard of Brussels soap, give him no peace until he orders some. It is not adulterated.

SOUTH QUINCY.

There was a sweet time in the freight yard at the Quincy Adams station, Wednesday morning. E. Arnold had just rolled a large hoghead of molasses from a car to his express wagon, when the horses started suddenly and the hoghead rolled to the ground, and the head bursted the 150 or more gallons of molasses flowed out. It was a total loss, and one the young expressman can ill afford to lose.

John A. Newcomb, a carpenter, cut his foot seriously while an axe on Wednesday while at work on Summer street.

There seems to be a backwardness about coming forward among the holders of boxes at the South Quincy post office, least the office may be abolished and they will not at a quarters rent. There is no prospect of free delivery being started in the city however, before Jan. 1.

John C. Murray, the leader of the Presbyterian choir, will open a congregational singing class the first Wednesday in November, to continue thirteen weeks. The proceeds will be given to benevolent purposes.

About 11.30 Thursday morning fire was discovered around the chimney in the house owned by Mr. John Brooks, at the corner of School and Marsh streets. W. E. Dewhurst and family occupy the house, and they promptly notified the permanent fire alarm.

The steam house, who has a few buckets of water extinguished the blaze. A line of hose was laid from the hydrant near by, but was not used.

Mayor Porter has been engaged to give an address at St. John's Hall, Nov. 6, subject—"Closing the Operations of the War, March-April, 1865."

QUINCY POINT.

The following was clipped from a Honolulu Sandwich Island paper:

Complimentary Address.

The following document, an engrossed copy of which was presented to Capt. Dow explains itself—We, the undersigned passengers on board the barkentine Planter, sailing from San Francisco, August 20th, to Honolulu, H. I., hereby desire to express to Captain Freeman Dow, commander of said vessel, our heart-felt thanks and sincere appreciation of his kindness, courtesy, and the thorough and able maintenance in which he has conducted us on our journey across the mighty deep, and in studying our individual comforts and welfare, thus making our voyage a bright and happy experience, and one long to be remembered.

Signed:—Johanne de Bretteville, A. de Bretteville, Paul and Mand de Bretteville, H. Adams, Louis Van Orden, E. C. Winston, Laura Duncan, Arthur Genns.

Capt. Freeman Dow, son of Mr. Everett Dow, as a boy and sailor, was well known at the Point and Neck. He sailed his first voyage from this place, with Capt. Joseph Schuyler Penney. Since that time he has visited many domestic and foreign ports, and is one of the world's most generally and justly loved men.

Capt. Dow studied navigation in London, and went on the quarter deck fully equipped with his duties as an officer. He has been master six years, and is now commander of the barkentine Planter, one of the first and fastest vessels on the Pacific ocean. Capt. Dow was united in marriage August 24th, in San Francisco, to Miss Nellie L. Belter, of Quincy. This lady spent a year or two in Providence, R. I., and is kindly remembered by many of this city.

Tax Collector Adams visited the Point Thursday for the accommodation of tax payers in Ward two.

Mr. Charles W. Eldridge and family have removed from their present home on North street to East Boston.

Myron Tinkham will occupy Mr. Eldridge's house.

Miss Mabel Gels, youngest daughter of Mr. Jacob Gels, was surprised by some fifteen of her little friends on Monday night at her home on North street.

On his salary day, which is his birthday, a delightful evening was spent in games and other amusements. The young people were then invited to a tempting supper prepared by Mrs. Gels, who spared no pains to make the occasion a memorable one.

Mr. Frank House and family will occupy the Daniel Higgins estate, on Washington court during the winter.

The Ladies Aid Society connected with the corner church will give the first entertainment of the season on next Thursday evening in the vestry.

Mrs. Charles E. Whiton is visiting her daughter Miss May Cole at Adamsville, R. I.

The Neck people petitioned that Howard street be widened from Mr. S. F. Newcomb's grocery store to Quincy Avenue.

This was granted and $500 appropriated for the work. Work has been begun on the ledge opposite the grocery store, and the grade of the street is to be lowered two feet. This will not be an improvement; it is the electric car on the Point road, made at all cross streets, and this seems a necessary precaution. Some laughable incidents have occurred this week due to the cause that our elegant cars take so much less time to travel the ground. Would-be passengers have to look alive now.

Conductor Perry's familiar face has been missed from the Point route this week, but understood that he is to be transferred from Atlantic.

The time table as a whole is quite satisfactory, but a car for the 1.40 p. m. train to Boston, which has always been well patronized, would be appreciated.

A Self-Winding Clock.

A New Haven clock company, after a year or two of experiment, have at last perfected a piece of mechanism which, if it does not realize the desire for perpetual motion, seems at least to be a step in that direction. They are now manufacturing and about to put on the market a self-winding clock.

The motive power is furnished by electricity generated by two Lelanche cells, which do the work effectually for from twelve to eighteen months without renewal. The mechanism is simple in the extreme. Much of the ordinary clock is omitted and little remains save the escapement wheel. The clock is wound every hour by a current from two cells of the battery working through a pair of magnets. The main wheel, which revolves once an hour, connects the current at every revolution.

When the contact is first made and the current passes through the magnets the armature is pulled down to the magnet heads, drawing with it an arm which winds one tooth of the ratchet wheel, which is fastened to the box containing a spring of the finest steel attached to the centre pinion. This operation is repeated for five or ten seconds, at the rate of three blows a second until the spring is wound and the current is cut off by the passage around of the main wheel.—Hartford Times.

Salt is Good.

Salt in the whitewash will make it stick better.

Wash the mica of the stove doors with salt and vinegar.

Brass work can be kept beautifully bright by occasionally rubbing with salt and vinegar.

Damp salt will remove the discoloration of cups and saucers caused by tea and careless washing.

When broiling steak throw a little salt on the coals and the blaze from dripping fat will not annoy.

To clean willow furniture, use salt and water. Apply it with a nail brush, scrub well and dry thoroughly.

If, after having a tooth pulled, the mouth is filled with salt and water, it will allay the danger of having a hemorrhage.

Salt as a tooth powder is better than almost anything that can be bought. It keeps the teeth brilliantly white and the gums hard and rosy.

Carpets may be greatly brightened, by first sweeping thoroughly and then going over them with a clean cloth and clear salt and water. Use a cupful of coarse salt to a large basin of water.

If the feet are tender or painful after long standing or walking, great relief can be had by bathing them in salt and water.

A handful of salt to a gallon of water is the right proportion. Have the water as hot as can comfortably be borne.—Philadelphia Press.

A Little Angel Among Sinners.

A minister's little daughter was attending her first church service, at which her father presided. She had never seen him in the pulpit before, and, on his entrance there, her presence of mind forsook her and she piped up in a voice expressive of joyful recognition: "Why! there's my papa up in that box!" Avenging propriety swept down upon the little maiden, and for a season there was a great calm. But the services were grievously long to such a wee worshipper, and she became very restless, walking up and down the pew and sighing audibly. Mamma whispered comfortingly, "Papa's almost through, dear," whereupon ensued another brief period of quiet; but it was not to last. Tired baby nature had reached its utmost limit of endurance, and by and by, over the quiet listeners, arose a little voice—clear and plaintive and coaxing—"isn't you most frow, papa?"—Toledo Blade.

An Indignant Woman.

In a Vine-street cable car, the other day, were an old gentleman, with an ear trumpet, and a very pretty young woman, accompanied by a little boy. She smiled at intervals on the boy, and she showed her pretty teeth in a bewitching way. All at once the old man, in the way peculiar to so many deaf people who do not know how to moderate their voices, said in tones so loud as to be audible all over the car: "I only paid $5 for my upper teeth. What did yours cost?" To say that the pretty woman was mad, is putting it mildly. She flounced around with a flush of anger blazing in her cheeks, and signalled the conductor to let her out at the next crossing.—Cincinnati Times Star.

Singular Accident.

According to the Philadelphia Times, Jacob Hollenberger of Reading, Pa., nineteen years of age, is dying from a peculiar accident. He was at work in a stove foundry, and while carrying a ladle filled with molten iron some one dropped a piece of cold iron in the fluid. An explosion followed. Hollenberger was in the red-hot iron entered his mouth and slid down his throat, and there it cooled off and now remains in a fixed position near the entrance to the stomach. He is unable to eat any food. He has been kept alive by means of the injections into his intestines of liquid food, but is slowly and surely starving to death. His appeals for food are heart-rending, but he is unable to swallow it.

Postmaster General Wanamaker will urge Congress to reduce the requirements for the free post-office delivery from 10,000 population or the postal receipts of $10,000, to 8,000 population and $8,000 receipts.

DECORATIVE FURNITURE.

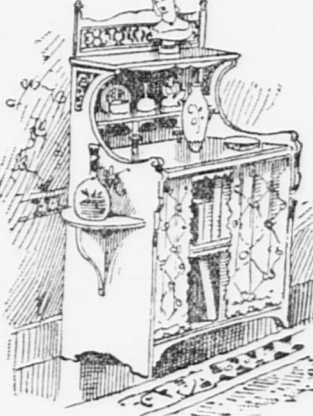

Articles Which Would Do Much to Make a Room Attractive.

The following sketches are from the pencil of Mr. W. Timms, the well known contributor to The London Cabinet Maker. In Fig. 1 the leading lines of the wall bracket and flap table are Anglo-Moresque. The little two fold screen is somewhat Japanese in character.

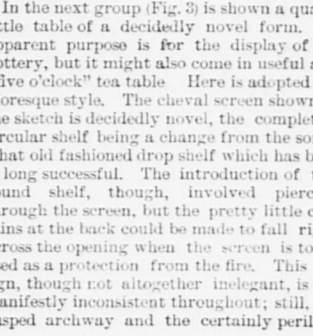

The two first articles would perhaps look best finished in a cream colored enamel, with gold leather paper at the back of the bracket, and the screen might perhaps be produced in a bronze. The panels of this to be of painted Japanese silk with a deeper colored border. The transparent painted silk panels are dainty in coloring and very effective, and while they are also remarkably cheap, they make a pleasant change from the recently much used French cretonnes.

In Fig. 2 a species of decorative furniture is illustrated which might almost be described as a substitute for the cabinet. The low top with the overhanging shelf above, the side brackets and the curtains, are, all of them, attractive features which raise the thing above the commonplace class of goods. In point of detail it is refined, and if finished in cream, with gold leather paper at the back and pale blue curtains in the front, it would make a charming little item of drawing room furniture—not only artistic in appearance, but also sufficiently low in price to be popular.

In the next group (Fig. 3) is shown a quaint little table of a decidedly novel form. Its apparent purpose is for the display of art pottery, but it might also come in useful as a "five o'clock" tea table. Here is adopted the Moresque style. The cheval screen shown in the sketch is decidedly novel, the completely circular shelf being a change from the somewhat old fashioned shelf which has been so long successful. The introduction of this round shelf, though, involved piercing through the screen, but the pretty little curtains at the back could be made to fall right across the opening when the screen is to be used as a protection from the fire. This design, though not altogether elegant, is yet manifestly inconsistent throughout, still, the cusped archway and the certainly perilous shelf with the portiere at the back, are pretty features and novel, and well calculated to captivate the feminine fancy. Cream enamel and rose colored silk would make an appropriate combination for this screen. The hybrid article which figures in the next sketch (Fig. 4) is neither a small cabinet nor a table—perhaps it should be rightly called a wainscot. It is designed in the Japanese style, and the side rails intended to be pierced right through in the characteristic manner. At present there are comparatively few substitutes for the old fashioned low wainscot, and a variety of some such contrivance as this would be acceptable. The small flower vase stand at the side is decidedly Egyptian in manner, and if produced in black with red lines would be both stylish and effective. The majority of such stands are at present made much taller than this one, though a small arrangement of this description is certainly more useful for heavy vases. In the companion table to the right the star form is utilized for the top, and a small bracket has been brought out to support each alternate angle.

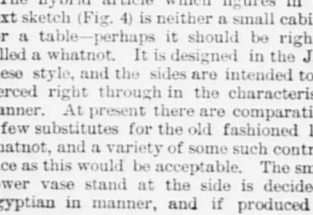

Fig. 5. The top of this table is of a star shape, and the wainscot is of a similar shape. The top is of a star shape, and the wainscot is of a similar shape. The top is of a star shape, and the wainscot is of a similar shape.

ECCENTRIC EPIGRAPH. Andrew J. Geiger, who died lately in Philadelphia, leaving an estate of $250,000, directed that an obelisk should be erected over his grave which, besides the usual mortuary inscription, should bear many others. The north panel will bear this inscription: "Travelled 60,000 miles in America, Europe, Asia and Africa." The south panel is to read: "Young man, stop and think. See what has been the reward for honesty, industry and economy. In 1840 I worked on Robert Martin's farm near Jersey shore for 25 cents a day. No fortune left to me." The west panel will say: "Lived and died in the faith of the immutable and unchangeable and Nature's God. Believed in the Gospel of Peace, Right and Justice."

A COLD WINTER PREDICTED. Farmers predict a long, cold, hard winter. Try the skin of any of your fruit. You find apples, peaches, grapes and all fruit, which is home grown, with thicker and tougher skin than you have seen for several years. This is the way nature takes care of her products. Last winter apples and other fruit was so thin skinned and tender that it was hard to gather them without bruising, and we had an extraordinary mild winter. Corn is another of nature's signboards; the ears are protected by thicker and stronger husks than before for years. Wheat and rye straw are tougher, hay is wireier and the seed pods are better protected than usual.—Exchange.

TO BE EXHIBITED. Millet's picture, L'Angelus, would have to pay a duty of $82,500 if intended for permanent importation, but it will be bonded for $65,000, and allowed to be taken out of the Custom House for six months, for exhibition purposes, without payment of duty. The famous picture now lies in a plush case inclosed in a hermetically sealed tin box, which in turn lies in an iron-bound wooden case. It was insured for $120,000 against loss at sea. It will be deposited in a safety vault until Mr. Robertson, of the American Art Association, arrives from Europe, and will be placed on exhibition early next month.

DANGER. The danger of electric wires is again illustrated at Salem, Monday evening Oct. 14, says the Herald, one went down on Elm street and crossed the telephone wires, which set the telephones to ringing in many houses and offices, and those who went to answer them received shocks, in some cases almost knocking them down. The telephone circuit was shut off at 5:30 as a matter of safety, but not until many telephones had been burned out. A number of horses were thrown down as they crossed the wire on Elm street.

THE RISING SUN STOVE POLISH.

Beware of paint and paste polish said to be labor saving, self-shining, etc., which stain the hands, pit the iron, and fill the house with a poisonous and sickening odor when heated. Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with inflammable liquid stove polish, paints and enamels in bottles. "The Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass package with every purchase.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

Miss Sarah Irving, a niece of Washington Irving, welcomes the guests who come to the novelist's old home.

The National Library at Paris, France, is the largest in the world, containing over 2,000,000 volumes.

One of the remarkable things said to be in Utah is a mountain near Salt Lake City completely covered by oyster shells.
This mountain is nearly 9,000 feet above
the level of the sea.

A dog, which had been lost for 16 months, recently walked into its old master's home in Logan, O. It is a mystery where the brute was during its absence.

It took a California court less than 24 hours to catch a thief, find him guilty and lodge him in the penitentiary to serve out a 10-year sentence.

A charter has been granted for the first railroad in Liberia. It will be 650 miles long.

Alaska cost the United States government 2 cents an acre.

Texas negroes own 1,000,000 acres and $20,000,000.

Lyman Davis, aged 114, probably the oldest man in New York State, died in Salisbury, Oct. 23. He was a farmer, and had lived in Salisbury for nearly a century.
He remembered well events of 100 years ago.

OLEO. Oleo promises to become an issue in the present State campaign, and the Farmers' League, which now numbers upwards of 30,000 members, are securing pledges from non-members not to vote for any candidate for the legislature who will not favor a bill to prohibit the coloring of oleo to imitate butter. They don't ask that the manufacture of oleo shall be prohibited, but simply that it shall not take on the yellow color of butter, so that both butter and oleo may be sold on their merits for what they are, and at butter and oleo prices.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S NEW YORK REAL ESTATE. Apropos of the royal marriage debate in England it is worth while to note that a part of Queen Victoria's savings is invested in real estate in New York city, and each year the queen of England draws a handsome income from rentals paid by resident New Yorkers.
The rents are collected quietly, and perhaps the tenants themselves do not know that their payments go to the British queen.—
New York Star.

LEASED FOR 999 YEARS. The Twenty-third Street horse railroad of New York, which was Jacob Sharpe's pet, has passed into control of the old Avenue C road, now known as the Houston, West Street &
Pavonia Ferry Company, of which Col.
Daniel Scott Lamont is president. The unusual activity in the Twenty-third Street company's stock has been a matter of comment, and at last the explanation came.
Papers leasing the Twenty-third Street road to the Houston, West Street and Pavonia Ferry Company for 999 years have been prepared, and signed.

Accounts have been received of a so-called snow-flower, said to have been discovered by Count Antokosoff in the most northern portion of Siberia, where the ground is continually covered with frost. The wonderful object shoots forth from the frozen soil only on the first day of each succeeding year. It lives for but a single day then resolves to its original elements. They are developed only on that side of the stem toward the north, and each seems to be covered with microscopic crystal of snow.

There lives in Union township, Ind., a family that can boast of the most curiously complicated relationship. Some years ago a widower named Horgan, who had a grown son, married a widow who had a young daughter. After a while he and his wife secured a divorce. His son then fell in love with his father's divorced wife and married her. The father got married to the daughter of the woman from whom he had been divorced. Each couple has children, and the two families are terribly mixed as to their relationship.

TRUTH in a NUTSHELL. Says the Attleboro Daily Sun: "When the public does not care enough for its own interests to act in any manner which affects them,
the press cannot be expected to continue agitation of such a matter. If general apathy produces results unsatisfactory to the public, they have only themselves to blame."

The female giraffe at the Zoological Garden in Cincinnati, O., gave birth to a young male giraffe on Sunday forenoon.
This is said to be the first born in captivity in America. The youngster is nearly five and a half feet high, and his estimated weight is 150 pounds.

Indented writing upon iron has just been successfully done by John Farrar, an Eastern iron foundryman, by the following process:—The impression on the iron is made by writing backwards on thin paper, pinning the paper in a mould, and then pouring on the iron. The writing thus transferred to the plates, when the iron is cooled, is wonderfully clear and distinct, and is so deeply imprinted as to defy any attempt at erasure.

Henry Clews of Wall street fame, devotes all his spare time and attention to his house. You can take his attention away from his business if you begin to talk about his house, and he is perfectly delighted when anybody requests to be taken over the building. His bath-room is of solid onyx, and cost fifty thousand dollars.

A UNIQUE HOUSE.

It is All in One Story and Has No Stairs
to Be Climbed.

We often use the term "modern conveniences" without fully understanding what it means by the expression. In the log cabin two or three rooms, modern conveniences are not thought of. It is a good deal easier, as far as housekeeping is concerned, to care for one of these houses than it is of a larger house.
There is not so much of it; there cannot be so much work to do. However, if we take the general conditions which apply to housekeeping in the log cabin and the conveniences which are attached thereto, and apply them to an eight or ten room house, we find a change. The work of caring for this house is vastly different. Modern conveniences are the compensating details which are applied to a larger house and which undertake to reduce the labor of housekeeping to that which approaches the work to be done in a smaller house. But they do not accomplish this.
Modern conveniences merely make it possible to live in a larger house and do the work connected with it with an ordinary expenditure of money and energy. Generally speaking the saving of money is accomplished in the most part, however, little surplus energy remains.

VIEW.

In the old house we had two fires, in the large one we have five or six, unless we have a furnace. Hence, the furnace is a modern convenience, a labor saving device. In the small house we had only to carry water to the kitchen. A wash bowl and pitcher in a bedroom was unusual. There was little water to be carried. When one had occasion to use the wash pan he was supposed to empty the water himself. In the large house, without the modern conveniences, there would be a wash bowl and pitcher and a slop jar in each of the bedrooms. Hence, a great deal of water to be carried to and from these rooms.
Plumbing apparatus with hot and cold water supplied to the kitchen, one or more stationary wash stands on the second floor, a water closet and bath tub in bathroom will partially compensate for the added labor of housekeeping in a larger house.

In the three room house the kitchen, china closet, pantry, dining room, sitting room, were all in one, not infrequently there was no cellar. A parlor was not thought of in connection with that house. The requirements of modern living call for a separate apartment for each of the rooms named. In the matter of sweeping and dusting there can be no comparison. In the kitchen we have hot and cold water more convenient than in the smaller house, we have tables, sinks and drain boards, and while they afford advantages in preparing the food, washing and caring for dishes and utensils, it is true that the conveniences require a certain amount of care to keep them clean. The closets of other rooms and the gas for lighting in lieu of lamps and candles are conveniences which are supposed to make the labor of living in a larger house measurably commensurate with that of the smaller one.
However, the added number of rooms, the larger amount of surface to be cared for in sweeping, dusting and in other ways which belong to the larger house cannot be compensated for by the addition of modern conveniences so as to make the labor of housekeeping in the larger house compare with that of the smaller one. While there is added comfort and luxury there is added work, even with compensating conditions of labor saving devices.

The plan which is here presented is of a one story house. It is suited to the requirements of a small family. There is a hall in the center, a small library at one side with a door closing it from the hall, a sitting room on the right separated from the hall by turned square work at one side of and above an opening, all of which is backed up by portiers. There is a grate in the reception hall, library and parlor. All of the rooms are heated by a furnace. The bathroom is accessible from the hall and the principal chamber.
The kitchen is modern in its arrangements;
is provided with the usual equipment of tables, sink and drainboard. There is a pantry and passage between kitchen and dining room, with a place for refrigerator and dough board therein, and side connections with the china closet and dining room. In the high part of roof the girl's room is provided. By a change in the china closet a combination stairway could be arranged which would afford passageway from the dining room as well as from the kitchen to an added number of sleeping rooms above. It would require some change in the general stair arrangement, but altogether would be feasible.

A Western Belle.
The belle of Deadwood, South Dakota, is a young and dashing girl who turned her 19th year on Monday last. Her name is Margaret Sanford, and she is an orphan.
Who her mother was no one seems to know.
Her father entered a mining camp about 12 years ago, footsore, ragged and almost starved, having walked across the canyons
from Nevada. The miners gave him food and clothing and began to constitute themselves little Margaret's body guard. One night the old man was found dead before his door, which the drifting snow had fastened so he could not enter. The child was asleep inside. After the funeral she became a sort of wanderer, going and coming at will, and making many valuable discoveries of ore. She learned to use the rifle and revolver, and became one of the crack shots of the camp. With two exceptions she was never molested, and there was a funeral after each of these attacks.
A year ago she struck an ore bed richer
than the most in that vicinity, and again led the miners to the spot. This time they made a voluntary contract to give her one-fourth of the yield. They kept their word, and she is now a rich woman. She is tall, slender and good looking, and wears long golden hair streaming down her back. On horseback she is a perfect backwoods picture with her short skirt, buckskin leggings, brown shoes and wide-brimmed hat.

A Good Story.

The Brunswick, Ga., Times tells a good railroad story. "I was on the night run,"
said the engineer, and my train was about thirty minutes late. I said to my fireman,
'keep her hot; I mean to go to meeting point on time.' During the next fifteen minutes I was not long in passing the mile posts, for my engine flew along at the rate of fifty miles an hour down a long grade as straight as an arrow. Suddenly something struck me in the face, making a slight wound. I slowed down. 'What's that near the furnace door?' I asked of the fireman, pointing to a little bit of white paper lying to my left. The fireman stooped, picked up the paper and handed
it to me. In the dim light of the steam guage I read, 'Lie out at the river bridge; there's a tie on the track.' Sure enough, just at the entrance of the bridge
I found a tie securely fastened across the track. The piece of paper has been framed and hung over the engineer's parlor
mantel, and he calls it his mascot, for he has never been behind since it was thrown into his cab.

TARANTULAS. A steamer arrived at Philadelphia recently with a cargo of fruit
and a number of tarantulas on board.
Members of the crew were often obliged to keep watch at night and sweep the creatures into the ocean as fast as they crawled on deck. The vessel was loaded to its hatchways. At times the deck was literally covered with them, and some were as big around the body as a good sized orange.

LOUIS H. GIBSON.

FLOOR PLAN.

A Busy Session.

There are not many senators and representatives in Washington now, but most of those here expect a very interesting and busy session of Congress during the coming winter. The tariff, trusts, the Civil Service law, the Interstate Commerce law, the educational question, a National Election law, and subsidies will be among the subjects that will engage the attention of Congress. What are recognized as the great questions of the day will, for the most part, be presented as party measures and are likely to render the coming session a very important one. Senator Dolph thinks Congress will take no backward step in the matter of legislation of interstate commerce or Civil Service reform.
Both the Interstate Commerce Law and the Civil Service Law, he thinks, will probably be amended, but not so as to destroy their efficiency. The race question he says, will undoubtedly be discussed in connection with contested election cases, and independently of them. It is a live question, and will not down at any bidding.
He feels confident that the tariff will be revised, and the service of the revenue diminished. Some measures not very dissimilar to the Senate bill will be passed.
It is possible, he thinks, that some bill on the subject of trusts will be passed. The power of Congress over this subject is, however, so limited as to render of little value any law which it may pass to prevent or control trusts in the States.

The postoffice inspectors of the country have been holding a conference in Washington during the week. All the inspectors have been in attendance, including George S. Evans, who is stationed in Boston, and the daily meetings, which are private, have been presided over by Chief Inspector Rathbone. The meetings have an important bearing on the administration of the Postoffice Department, and Postmaster-General Wanamaker, has personally interested himself in the sessions to the extent of attending a number of them and participating in the work. It was thought that the present conference would be only a matter of a few days, but the importance of the work and the extent of its scope will lengthen out the meeting until Saturday of this week. This has inconvenienced some of the inspectors, especially those from a short distance, who came only for a short session. The conference is called to devise readier and better methods of detecting and preventing crime in the postal service, and of insuring greater safety in the transmission and delivery of valuables through the United States mails. Many good suggestions are being made in the conference, and the result of these sessions are expected to place the service on an excellent footing as to surety.

Margaret Sanford, and she is an orphan.
Who her mother was no one seems to know.
Her father entered a mining camp about 12 years ago, footsore, ragged and almost starved, having walked across the canyons
from Nevada. The miners gave him food
and clothing and began to constitute themselves little Margaret's body guard. One night the old man was found dead before
his door, which the drifting snow had fastened so he could not enter. The child was asleep inside. After the funeral she became a sort of wanderer, going and
coming at will, and making many valuable discoveries of ore. She learned to use the rifle and revolver, and became one of the crack shots of the camp. With two exceptions she was never molested, and there was a funeral after each of these attacks.
A year ago she struck an ore bed richer
than the most in that vicinity, and again
led the miners to the spot. This time they made a voluntary contract to give her one-
fourth of the yield. They kept their word,
and she is now a rich woman. She is tall, slender and good looking, and wears
long golden hair streaming down her back. On horseback she is a perfect
backwoods picture with her short skirt,
buckskin leggings, brown shoes and wide-
brimmed hat.

A Good Story.

The Brunswick, Ga., Times tells a good
railroad story. "I was on the night run,"
said the engineer, and my train was about
thirty minutes late. I said to my fireman,
'keep her hot; I mean to go to meeting
point on time.' During the next fifteen minutes I was not long in passing the mile posts, for my engine flew along at the rate
of fifty miles an hour down a long grade as straight as an arrow. Suddenly something struck me in the face, making a slight wound. I slowed down. 'What's that near the furnace door?' I asked of the fireman, pointing to a little bit of white paper lying to my left. The fireman
stooped, picked up the paper and handed
it to me. In the dim light of the steam guage I read, 'Lie out at the river
bridge; there's a tie on the track.' Sure enough, just at the entrance of the bridge
I found a tie securely fastened across the track. The piece of paper has been framed
and hung over the engineer's parlor
mantel, and he calls it his mascot, for he has never been behind since it was thrown into his cab.

TARANTULAS. A steamer arrived at Philadelphia recently with a cargo of fruit
and a number of tarantulas on board.
Members of the crew were often obliged to
keep watch at night and sweep the
creatures into the ocean as fast as they crawled on deck. The vessel was loaded to its hatchways. At times the deck was literally covered with them, and some were as big around the body as a good sized orange.

DORCHESTER

VOL. 53. NO. 45.

QUINCY, MASS., SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1889.

PRICE 5 CENTS.

Ash Chamber Sets, $15.00.

The above price is rather low but yet we have them at this price. How does it happen? We will tell you the whole story. At a factory there were 100 sets ready to finish and for some reason to us unknown the factory took fire in one part of it and the 100 sets got some smoke on them, not enough to do harm except in the finish, they were brought to the lot at our price and as fast as possible we are finishing them in imitation of Walnut; the sets ought to sell for $25.00, but while they wait we offer them for $15.00 for 8 pieces. Thanksgiving day will soon be here and we trust our friends have much to be thankful for. We know we have, and right here let us say to the people of this City who so kindly enquire how we are getting along, that our trade has been very much larger than we could have expected, in fact our sales have been nearly double the amount owing to a number of reasons.

We find the good name we had during the five years we were in Brockton has followed us to Quincy. For in the past year we have sold not far from 5,000 Cases, yet up to this time we have never obliged a single person to give up a lot of goods. People in Brockton knew we were honest and would not take advantage of them. Then again we find that they give satisfaction to the people who visit our store to find such a big stock, larger than many of the large Boston Stores; and our prices are marked in Plain figures, at which price we sell on Weekly Payments and to Cash Customers we make a suitable discount so they can get the full value of their money. But where do our customers come from? Well a large number from this City, but also a large number from the towns within 10 miles. We suppose our teams are quite sure to go some part of Braintree at least once a day, and we have a good trade in Randolph, Haverhill, and in fact every town within 10 miles. We were very fortunate in getting so big a store at such a low rent and so well located, for it's location for our trade is the best in the City.

Perhaps you are a stranger to us and have never visited our store, if so we hope you will come soon and see the largest store in this part of the state, and for your information let us state that while we manufacture a large part of the goods that we sell, yet we keep a good stock of Cigars, Ranges, Barber Stoves, Crockery, Tin and Woodware, Ware, in fact about everything needed for Housekeeping, and if you have not the ready cash we will sell you on part payments.

We keep a big line of spring beds, mattresses, bed quilts, etc. But perhaps at this season of the year our most important department is our stove department. Our line of parlor stoves is large, and at all prices from $5.00 to $25.00. For ranges we have the Acorn. While there are a great many nice ranges in the market, the Acorn is without doubt the best. This is saying a good deal, but we think it can be proved by using, and surely there are more Acorns sold each year than of any one, and perhaps four or six kinds. We have a number of other kinds, but the Acorn is the best for a large family.

If you don't happen to have the ready cash, then pay us $3.00 cash and $1.00 per week, or $4.00 per month. We sell any stove or range that we have this way. We sell any kind of goods for a small sum down and the balance by the month or week. $20.00 worth of goods for $1.00 cash and $1.00 per week or $4.00 per month. Come and see us.

THE WEATHER FOR SATURDAY.

Blue Hill, Milton, Friday, Nov. 9, 1889.
Indications for Saturday: Rain; stationary temperature.
H. H. CLAYTON, Observer.

The New System.

The first election under the new Australian system has been held, and it is an open question whether it is a great improvement. Evidently it is not yet fully understood by the voters. One proof of this is the smallness of the votes for candidates and the consequent large number of blanks.

Charles H. Smith was the only candidate for County Treasurer, yet he only received in Quincy 1425 votes, out of a total of 2106. There were 824 blanks for Commissioners of Insolvency, out of a possible 618. In the important office of Representatives there were 990 blanks. It will be observed in the interesting summary below that the number of blanks increases as one reads down the ticket. It should be borne in mind that 2106 ballots were cast for one office.

	Votes.	Blank.
Governor,	2022	84
Lieut. Governor,	1960	110
Treasurer,	1425	141
Auditor,	1064	162
Attorney General,	1058	168
Comptroller,	1048	178
District Attorney,	1049	177
Sheriff,	1000	206
County Commissioner,	1027	189
Two Special Commissioners,	429	485
County Treasurer,	1425	681
Three Com. of Insolvency,	2484	824
Senator,	1044	102
Three Representatives,	5718	600

In the supplement will be found the full vote of Quincy, which has been revised by the official returns since published in the Patriot Extra Wednesday morning. With one exception, Henry E. Ruggles for Commissioner of Insolvency, every Democrat had a plurality in this city.

The loss of votes would seem to effect both parties alike. The Democratic plurality this year is nearly the same with one or two exceptions as in 1887. Last year it is true the Republican party was in the majority but it seems to be the custom for one party one year and the other the next. Citizens got tired of waiting for the election returns in this city. Two wards had not been heard from at midnight, and the people rightly desired it wise to retire and wait for the Patriot Extra in the morning. The following table shows the results of the election in each ward and the total.

Ward	Rep.	Dem.	Blank.
Ward One,	565	445	9.50 P. M.
Ward Two,	472	328	10.35 P. M.
Ward Three,	568	395	1.30 A. M.
Ward Four,	577	490	12.15 A. M.
Ward Five,	519	275	8.40 P. M.
Ward Six,	288	158	7.45 P. M.
Total,	2968	2106	58.35

Election Notes.

The law requires that the Mayor, City Clerk and Aldermen shall meet forthwith after election and examine the returns. The Council instructed the Committee on Elections to meet at 7.30 p. m., Tuesday for the purpose. They met, waited until a few hours and seeing no prospect of getting the complete returns that night wisely decided to adjourn to morning. It was 3 a. m. before the official return of Ward Four was received.

The Representative vote is given on the first page of the supplement. With the exception of Sheriff and Representative, Braintree gave the Republican ticket a majority.

Ansie O. Clark of Braintree, a Democrat, will represent the Sixth Norfolk District in the Legislature. He is an excellent business man, and there is no doubt but he will well represent his district.

Assistance was given in Ward Three in marking the ballot to a gentleman who was a voter previous to 1875, and also to one physically disabled, who was unable to swear he was a voter previous to 1875 was declared.

The election returns of Quincy were among the last to be printed in the Boston dailies.

In the revision of the ward list the Board of Registrars dropped the name of Patrick Sullivan, having read in the Patriot of the death of one Patrick Sullivan of the same ward. Judge of their surprise Tuesday when Patrick Sullivan, who has been a voter many years, called and demanded to be restored. The deceased was not a voter.

Joseph Quincy and Dr. Everett received a flattering vote in Quincy. The three Republican nominees for Representatives.

Reports from each of the polling places will be found in the supplement.

Graduates who voted the straight Republican ticket can congratulate themselves that only two of their candidates were defeated.

The vote for Sheriff in this city was about two to one in favor of Pratt.

Representative Adams lacked 144 votes of a reelection. He was third man in Quincy, fourth in Weymouth, and fifth in the district.

The Patriot Extra.

The enterprise of the PATRIOT is commended universally. The paper was issued at 4 a. m., Wednesday morning, and was the only morning paper to print the Quincy vote. It was the first paper to give the choice of Representatives in this district and gave at that time the full vote of Quincy and Weymouth. Much of the success of the issue is due to the liberal support of the advertisers.

Free Delivery.

The city of Quincy is now practically all numbered, including the villages at West Quincy, Wollaston and Atlantic, and is now for the first time under a delivery system, as far as numbering the houses is concerned. Messrs. Mason & Co., have a correct directory of all the houses and vacant lots in the city, and all parties who are not numbered and wish to have their places correctly numbered by notifying J. S. Mason & Co., through the mail at Quincy, if one within a few days.

In territory Weymouth and Quincy are practically the same size, the assessors in the former town finding 9,041 taxable acres, while Quincy has 9,157. Weymouth has 2,297 houses, Quincy 2,610-12. A number of polls in Weymouth is 3,025, Quincy 4,319. The valuation of Weymouth is $695,185, Quincy $12,319,245.

Post Offices Compared.

A correspondent of the Enterprise would have the readers believe that the West Quincy post-office does a larger business than the Quincy office, but the salaries of the officers which are based on the amount of business done, will show the fallacy of any such argument. The salary of Postmaster Spear is twice as large as that of Postmaster Nutting, consequently the receipts of the office are twice as large.

Regarding the item of comparison. The count taken in the Quincy office was upon days selected by the Postmaster General, Tuesday and Wednesday, October 23rd and 24th. Any one acquainted with post-office matters knows Tuesdays and Wednesdays might be termed days of the number of pieces forwarded. Mondays is equal to both put together if not more; and Saturday is another good day. Therefore it would be unfair to compare Tuesday and Wednesday at the Quincy office with Saturday and Monday at West Quincy. It is not too much trouble we would ask Postmaster Spear to count the pieces any Monday, and we wager it would be larger than for West Quincy for the week.

It is no more nor less than a move of the Centre to hold the business of the city at that place. The writer is not too much business of the city spreading out to the south and west, and in order to retain their business they are eager to grasp at every opportunity, as the drawing man will grasp at a straw. In fact, the Quincy office will entirely swallow up West Quincy to a paltry subordinate station.

Regarding the free delivery service it adds:

The total salaries of the Quincy, West Quincy and South Quincy offices is $24,000. It will be observed that the Quincy office has a salary of $20,000, while West Quincy would have a salary of at least $1,000, which would leave only $1,000 for the Quincy office to pay for the service.

Such a situation would be truly alarming, but the facts are that the revenue to the government of the three offices is $100,000 per annum, and has been for the past years. Now, why should the government not pay $100,000 or more per annum in Quincy. If she does there is no reason why good free delivery service cannot be given.

Quincy Charitable Society.

The old Quincy Charitable Society held its annual meeting last Monday, Nov. 4th. It met at the house of Mrs. Benjamin Curtis who has been a member of the society for over fifty years, and who in these later times, has always claimed the privilege of having the first meeting of the season and the last at her home.

From the report of the secretary which was presented, it appears that the directors held six meetings during the year. From the treasurer's report, we glean the following facts:

To amount in bank Nov. 5th,	$28.11
Cash on hand same date,	6.48
Total,	$34.59
To income from Brackett fund,	14.00
To income from Brackett fund,	10.00
Members fees,	16.25
Donations,	5.00
Total,	$79.84
Disbursements,	32.20
Balance,	$47.64

Families assisted 27—American, 10; from British Provinces, 4; English, 5; Irish, 1; Welsh, 1.

Comparing this report with the report of last year, it appears that the total income had an increase of $12.00, and that the total disbursements have been increased to the extent of $60.00. The amount spent in relief seems to be growing greater every year. The last year the society spent $1,000.00. The report was given by Mr. J. S. Mason & Co., who was elected to the position of secretary.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Rev. D. M. Wilson.
Vice President—Rev. E. Norton.
Secretary—Mrs. C. A. Spear.
Treasurer—Mrs. H. B. Bass.
Directors—Mrs. Robert E. Johnson, Mrs. B. Curtis, Mrs. J. T. French, Miss Ann Curtis, Miss Flora M. Shackley, Mrs. Geo. W. Brooks, Mrs. W. E. Simmons, Miss Isabel F. P. Emery.

The Business Men's Association held a very interesting meeting on Thursday evening. The question of severance for the city was opened for discussion. Should it be done by a corporation, or by the city? It was warmly discussed by all present. Some of the members favored severance being built by a company, or corporation, others taking the ground that the city should do the work. But when severance is needed as much as they are in Quincy, if they neglected to do the work, then a company should be allowed the privilege of putting them in. At the close of the meeting the members partook of a substantial lunch provided by Landlord Nash of the Robertson House.

City Hall Chitchat.

A special meeting of the Council will be held Monday evening. The Council having overlooked the fact that it had made assignments for street hearings, Tuesday evening there will be an adjourned meeting.

The following notices of new buildings have been filed with Commissioner Pritchard: Mark E. Hanson, on West Main street; Thomas Kenyon, house on Squantum street.

Commissioner Pritchard has granted Thomas Kenyon license to move a house from Broadway to Squantum street, to be done in two days; W. B. White to move stable about 300 feet on Union street, work to be done in forty-eight hours.

The preliminary voting lists for the city election will be posted on Monday, and the city Registrar's notice to voters.

The following is the vote in this State on Tuesday last for Governor and Lieutenant Governor:

ANNUARY. The Norfolk County Register commenced its thirty-third volume on Saturday last, and Brother Huxford celebrated the event by giving the paper a new heading and a new name; the returns from all the towns but two, Norfolk and Weymouth in Norfolk county, give Summer, 11,964 votes, and Pratt, Dem., 11,805, a majority of 159 for Summer.

The Herald of Thursday says: There is no longer any doubt as to the result of the contest for district-attorney in the southeastern district, which comprises Norfolk and Plymouth counties. The full returns from all the towns but two, Norfolk and Weymouth in Norfolk county, give Summer, 11,964 votes, and Pratt, Dem., 11,805, a majority of 159 for Summer.

Harvey H. Pratt, the young Democratic lawyer, conceded the election to Judge George Pratt of Brockton. He is of the opinion that the election officers made some mistakes in the count, and in order to make the result correct, he will petition for a recount in the two counties.

Rheumatism,
BEING due to the presence of uric acid in the blood, is most effectively cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Be sure you get Ayer's and no other, and take it till the poisonous acid is thoroughly expelled from the system. We challenge attention to this testimony:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatism, being able to walk only with great difficulty, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw in a newspaper an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months, and am now completely cured. I have since had no return of the disease."—Mrs. L. A. Black, Nashua, N. H.

"One year ago I was taken ill with inflammatory rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite and my system disordered in every way. I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."—Mrs. L. A. Black, Nashua, N. H.

HOTEL DE KALB, ALABAMA.

A line engraving of the DeKalb hotel heads this communication. It was opened to guests in August last, and has 125 rooms. It is situated on rising ground, commanding a good view of the beautiful scenery along the valley and, when we were in the city it was full of guests. Elegant rooms and first-class table make this one of the most attractive hotels to be found anywhere in the South. The patrons have the comforts of home which is difficult to find in many of the hotels in "Dixie."

We were informed that the company had been offered $125,000 for the hotel and grounds, but refused to sell; as the property was paying twenty per cent. on that sum.

We learn by a Boston daily, that a syndicate is being formed to erect another large hotel in this flourishing city.

TEMPERANCE.
Furnished for publication by the W. C. T. U.

The following is from the address of A. P. Peck, D. D., before the Harvard Total Abstinence League, Cambridge, Oct. 8, 1889: "If I had a son I would not send him to college unless he would give me a pledge not to touch intoxicating liquors. I believe that college life is a crucial period, and habits formed there are not easily broken. Of my own class of fifty-three members—when the temptations to drink were less and there was even a prejudice against anything stronger than wine, when discipline was stricter, when we had less spending money—two died sober, one plunged into low dissipation and was only reformed after stern interference of his father; a fourth had his life shortened by his intemperance; a fifth, a man of fine abilities, was addicted to drink and failed of attaining more than a shadow of the reputation he might have had. All these men were drinkers in college, and all have been the experience that all other graduates who have fallen into bad habits of drink have contracted their ways in college. It is not safe to yield to the temptation even to a slight degree. I cannot recall from my knowledge any cases of men who have never been intemperate before twenty-five years of age becoming drunkards later. It is true that some intemperate men reform, but a very small percentage. But you say, we do not mean to become drunkards. That very same self-confidence which you express is dangerous. To be continued.

Anecdotes.

"May I call on you occasionally, Miss De Lancy?" said Bionas after the dance. "We seem already as old friends. Have I not seen you somewhere before?"

"Yes," was the cutting reply, "you saw me hanging on to the car strap one day last week while you were sitting down."

New York Evening Sun.

Servant—"Well, ma'am, if I come, I'll want two nights off, besides Sunday afternoon, every week."

Mistress—"Why, that is more time away from the house than even I can enjoy."

Servant—"Can't help that, ma'am. You ought to let 'im more perticular in making yer arrangements at the start, and for night this 'ere have the same privilege as myself, so yer might."

"How came the jury to acquit the prisoner?" asked the astonished stranger.

"The evidence all went to show, did it not, that he killed the man?"

"Yes," replied the jurymen, "but it also appeared in evidence, before the jury came in, that the man he killed always persisted in saying, 'It is so so' whenever anybody told him a bit of news."

"Begorra," said Pat, "O've slept sixteen hours. I want to be at it tight and get up at eight. That's sixteen."

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, NOV. 9, 1889.

Notes from Polling Places.

Ward One.

Promptly at 7 A. M. Warden Packard read the warrant. All the ward officers including deputies were present. The deputies were excused, but told to be handy in case any of the regular officers should be taken sick before 11 P. M. The official ballots and cards of instruction were posted, and the balloting commenced. Officers Hanson and Neal being on hand to preserve order. Dr. A. H. Gilson who had been in waiting an hour more or less to cast the first vote under the Australian system was the first to enter the hall. It did not take him long to mark his ballot and he was the first to deposit his ballot. In the meantime a dozen had entered within the hall, two more than the booths would hold, but they moved on quickly, some taking less than two minutes, others nearly five.

The following ward officers were on duty: Warden, Dr. Walter M. Packard. Clerk, R. W. William W. Ewell. Inspectors, Dr. Fred E. Green; R. James F. Merrill; D. Luke J. Coyle; R. Francis A. Spear.

Ward Two.

Arthur Newcomb had the distinction of casting the first vote in Ward Two. The progress of the voting is shown by the following hourly report:

At 8 o'clock,	50 votes.
" 9 "	" 90 "
" 10 "	" 118 "
" 11 "	" 150 "
" 12 "	" 175 "
" 1 "	" 244 "
" 2 "	" 284 "
" 3 "	" 308 "
" 4 "	" 340 "

Officers Hayden and Young were on duty. The following election officers served: Warden, R. Isaac M. Holt. Clerk, D. Michael T. Sullivan. Inspectors, R. Albert Keating; D. William H. Sampson, Jr. Inspectors, R. Horace O. Southern; D. James Collins.

Ward Three.

Although the old house was a little dark and lights were necessary, it answered very well for a polling place. Dr. Frank Crane was the first gentleman to vote. During the first two hours 88 votes were cast. Officers Litchfield and Ferguson were assigned to this ward.

The ward officers to serve were: Warden, Dr. John Curtis, 2d. Clerk, R. Franklin Curtis. Inspectors, Dr. Cornelius Moynihan; R. George O. Shirley; D. Daniel F. Driscoll; R. Charles H. Grindell.

Ward Four.

A large vote was polled in this ward. The first vote was cast by John J. Barry. There was hardly enough room for convenience and it was lucky that it was a pleasant day. Officers McKay and Bean were assigned to this ward.

The election officers to serve were: Warden, R. Charles L. Orne. Clerk, D. Thomas J. Foley. Inspectors, R. Frank E. Kimball; D. William D. Burns; R. George W. Thayer; D. John H. Boag.

Ward Five.

Voting was brisk at the opening of the polls in Ward Five, 40 votes being cast in the first 41 minutes, the first by Mr. C. T. Baker. The ward room was the best in the city. Officers Hunt and Seelye were the officers on duty.

The following election officers served: Warden, R. Wendell G. Corbell. Clerk, D. W. P. Chase, Jr. Inspectors, D. Daniel C. Lyons, R. David C. Nelson, D. Michael W. Gerry, R. Henry W. Read.

Ward Six.

Councilman Hall threw the first ballot cast, in Ward Six, and as less than twenty votes an hour were cast the excitement did not run high. Officers McGrath and Halloran had an easy time maintaining order. The election officers to serve were: Warden, D. Edmund Pope. Clerk, R. Cephas Drew. Inspectors, D. Daniel C. Lyons, R. David C. Nelson, D. Michael W. Gerry, R. Henry W. Read.

The Representative Ticket.

Following is the vote of the Fifth Norfolk Representative District, by towns and total. The Representative of the district is Democrat, of this city is handsomely elected. His colleagues are Joseph A. Cushing and Louis A. Cook, Republicans of Weymouth, the latter being re-elected.

Jacob F. Dizer, 62	158	220
Elisha F. Pratt, 48	85	133
William W. Marple, 80	52	132

An event Tuesday, more exciting than the polling places occurred on Hancock street. A hack was driving out of John Hall's livery stable when an electric car approached from South Quincy. The Weymouth horses for the moment were thrown into the air by the car, and the car was stopped, a few feet off, and with the assistance of several men the horses were extricated from their entangled position, and the only injury was a few scratches to the harness.

New York's Milk Business.

The milk business of New York city and vicinity affords farmers who furnish the milk an annual income of $100,000,000, although the average price they receive is hardly 25 cents a quart. Over 200,000 cows and $60,000,000 of capital are employed in the production of milk, exclusive of the investments of railroads and other enterprises. An elaborate map, showing the various milk routes, accompanies a comprehensive article on the subject in the American Agriculturist for November. It is the first map of the kind ever published. It shows that milk is hauled 300 miles on the longest route, and is drawn from five states. The article also explains the production of milk on model dairy farms, and points out the errors of the present methods of farm management, and how farmers can unite to reform these abuses.

THE WEATHER FOR SATURDAY.

Blue Hill, Milton, Friday, Nov. 15, 7 P.M.
Indications for Saturday: Fair and cooler. During the night and early morning the mercury will go below the freezing point.

H. H. CLAYTON, Observer.

The Record Broken.

Believing the fire apparatus could beat the fine record of a few weeks ago, and that under less favorable circumstances, Chief Engineer Ripley had another trial last Saturday afternoon, which was highly satisfactory. It was to represent a "night alarm," that is, the drivers, engineers and firemen were undressed and in bed when the signal was given, yet the Steamer, Hose and Hook were all out of the house in eight minutes and thirty seconds, which is the "day alarm." They went twice around the square formed by Marsh, Quincy, Pleasant and School streets, and located at the Town Hook. The steam gauge recorded ten pounds in seven minutes, thirty in eight minutes and fifty in ten. Water was forced through the hose in eight and one-half minutes.

Another interesting test was that of locating the Steamer 200 feet from a hydrant. Plenty of water was furnished to the hose, and the knowledge obtained will be of use in some instances.

The Chief, the drivers, the engineers and the hosemen are to be congratulated on the record made.

Brooks-Hall.

A pretty wedding took place Tuesday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Hall, 150 Hancock street, their daughter, Miss Irene M., being united in marriage to Mr. Charles H. Brooks, one of Quincy's most enterprising and popular young men. The contracting parties were attended by Miss Carrie M. Hall as maid of honor and Mr. Samuel E. Ames as best man, and Misses Lila and Cora Howe of Somerville as bridesmaids. Mr. H. F. New played the wedding march. Rev. Edward Norton was the officiating clergyman. The bridal party stood beneath a large handsome arch of chrysanthemums and pansies. The bride wore a cream-faille Froisauze with veil and train and carried white roses. There was a rich display of useful, fancy and valuable presents. Mr. and Mrs. Brooks left that evening amid a shower of fire and old shoes for a short tour. They will be "at home" on Centre street Wednesdays and Fridays in December.

The Sewer Question.

The Business Men's Association held a meeting next Thursday evening, to which the public is invited. All are expected to freely express their views in regard to the desirability of the establishment of a sewerage system, and whether such a work is best performed by the city in its corporate capacity, or by private enterprise.

There is great diversity of opinion on this point, and it seems to be a good time and opportunity to give the subject a thorough discussion.

Every wide awake citizen of Quincy should be on hand in this springing the problem to a proper solution.

The city of Quincy is progressing rapidly in various matters of material progress, and it looks now, as though she would in time make the model city of Eastern Massachusetts.

The Fountain.

The granite fountain fund grows slowly. If the money already subscribed were paid in, about one-half of the necessary fund would be raised. The work of getting this $5,000 means patience and hard effort, but Miss Brackett's grand donation lessened this greatly, and it should stimulate all to send what they can to the society. It is intended that all shall have an opportunity to give, but we wish those who feel loyal to it would not wait to be asked. A granite memorial could not have taken a more pleasing shape than that of a drinking fountain.

City Hall Chitchat.

The Registrars will hold three meetings to revise the voting lists for the city election, tonight and next Wednesday and Saturday evening. Registration closes Nov. 23.

The Board of Health met last Saturday evening. The only important business was concerning the water of the City Water Company. A report to the City Council was framed; whether it was favorable or otherwise to the company we cannot say.

Republican Delegates.

Caucuses were held in Wards One and Four Thursday evening for the choice of delegates to a convention to nominate a Mayor and five Councilmen at large, resulting as follows:

Ward One—Frank B. Foster, Joseph C. Morse, George O. Langley, John F. Merrill, Wilson Marsh, Thomas Butler, E. W. H. Bass, F. A. Spear, W. W. Adams, Charles Craze, and Francis Veazie—11.

Ward Four—Thomas F. Burke, Tobias H. Burke, Robert J. Treadwell, Arthur E. Baxter, Walter H. Ripley, Charles L. Hammond and John D. Nutting.

The caucus in Ward Two was to be held last evening, and those of Wards Three, Five and Six this evening.

The convention will be held at the Ward room City Hall, next Tuesday evening.

Caucuses will also be held next week to nominate ward Councilmen, and members of the School Committee.

ANNIVERSARY. It was a small assembly which assembled in Faxon Hall Monday evening, to attend the anti-slavery meeting. Mr. Hiram W. Blanchard of Neponset, presided. His remarks on the exciting times before us were quite interesting. He was followed by Mr. J. Milton Clark, who was a runaway slave forty-five years ago and was entertained by Mr. George S. T. Whiting of Quincy avenue, in this city. Rev. Eben Muse closed the meeting with interesting remarks.

SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION. The Norfolk S. S. Union met in the Universal Church in this city on Thursday. There were three sessions morning, afternoon and evening. Delegations from thirty parishes in the Union were present and took part in the exercises. The meetings were very interesting and greatly enjoyed. The ladies of the parish furnished the visitors with dinner and supper, which was much appreciated.

The "Total Abstinence Societies" will hold a no-license conference on Monday next at 12 o'clock, in Congregational House, Pilgrim Hall, corner of Beacon Street and Somerset street, Boston, and it is hoped that a large delegation will be present from this city.

CITY BRIEFS.

Thanksgiving is close at hand.

Are you going to the G. A. R. fair?

It is said Mr. Sigourney Butler will be the Democratic candidate for Mayor.

J. F. Merrill has enlarged the office in his store to nearly double its former size.

There will be a grand military display and competitive drill at the G. A. R. fair.

Among the pensions issued the past week was one to T. J. H. Thayer of Quincy Neck.

Caucuses are coming in thick and fast, and the majority conventions must be held next week.

The Paul Revere Woman's Relief Corps had a very pleasant party at Faxon Hall on Thursday evening.

The Quincy club was represented at the annual ball of the Bay View Yacht Club of South Boston, Monday evening.

The Mayor has signed the orders making the Willard School appropriation and changing the name of Cemetery street.

As Thanksgiving comes the last Thursday in November the Hospital Aid Association will meet the third Thursday, Nov. 21st.

Only 1700 votes were cast in Weymouth at the State election about 2100 in Quincy, yet the former town was the larger ten years ago.

The city election follows close on the State election, seemingly much nearer than it would if the nominations could be delayed as formerly.

A union Thanksgiving service will be held at the Presbyterian Church this year. Rev. Edward Norton and other ministers will take part.

Are you going to see the grand display of stereoscopic views in front of Hancock street, between the hours of 7 and 8 every evening next week?

Miss Ethel, the six-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Balcock of Bigelow street, gave a party to twenty-one of her little friends on Tuesday.

Prof. Bush and wife left this week for their pleasant home in Bellevue, Fla., where they will pass the winter. Mr. Bush's mother accompanied them.

The person finding a book of tickets between Quincy and Boston will be rewarded, by leaving it at the PATRIOT Office. It was lost by a person who could ill afford to part with it.

Mr. Paul W. Adams leaves on Tuesday for Georgia, Florida and Alabama on a business trip for J. W. Brigham & Co., Boston. May he meet with success on his first trip.

The number of blanks cast in Weymouth for Representatives to the General Court was 465. These with the 600 in Quincy make nearly 1100, only 407 less than Candidate Byron received.

Edward Keegan, a quartermaster at Churchill & Hitecock's, dropped dead of heart disease while at work Monday morning. He resided on Gloucester place, and leaves a widow and six children.

The Swedish Lutheran Church will hold a three days' fair in Plummer's Hall, next week, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. On one evening the Swedes will appear in the costumes of their native land.

In the chapel of St. Ursula Sunday morning the Rev. James DeNormandie, Boston, will deliver a discourse on "The Perfect Character." Services begin at 7:30 o'clock, and the public are cordially invited.

Miss Florence P. Saville whose marriage to Mr. L. R. Ayer in Somerville, Nov. 7th, announced in another column, is a native of this city and has many relatives and friends residing here. Our congratulations are extended to the happy couple.

A very interesting letter from Mr. Chas. W. Johnson, entitled "Southward Bound" has been crowded out this week; also a communication about the Quincy Post office, and many other articles prepared for this issue.

President Federhen of the Quincy City Council was among the few invited guests at the raising of the first flag of the home of Governor-elect Brackett Monday evening. He made a happy hit in congratulating the ladies of Arlington upon soon having among them the first lady of the State.

At the Congregational Church tomorrow morning, Rev. W. B. M. Gray, State Superintendent of Sabbath Schools in South Dakota, will speak of his work. At this service will be taken the annual collection for Home Mission. At 7 in the evening, the pastor will preach.

Friday evening, Nov. 22d, there will be a competitive drill at G. A. R. fair, a squad of Charlestown Cadets, Co. 5th Regiment, and a squad from Braintree Light Infantry, Co. K. 5th Regiment. The prize to be a beautiful silk flag. Noted military men will be present.

Master Sidney C. Hardwick brought into our office one day this week a very handsome bunch of apple blossoms, gathered from one of his father's trees on Washington street. It is rather an unusual thing to gather apple blossoms in November in Massachusetts; but this year seems to be an exception to the general rule.

The death of Mr. Norton Q. Pope of Spear street on the 8th inst., followed close on that of his beloved wife for thirty-six years. He was born in 1802 and during business life was a manufacturer of boots. Rev. D. M. Wilson officiated. The aged couple were interred in one grave at the Mount Wollaston Cemetery on Sunday.

Clan McGregor will observe the tenth anniversary of St. Andrew by a grand concert and ball in the Coliseum Thanksgiving eve. The following artists are announced: Miss Kate F. Garrity, soprano; Miss Mary P. White, contralto; Mr. J. A. Robertson, tenor; Mr. J. A. Wild, comedian; and Mr. William Wilson, accompanist. A. E. Nash will cater.

Thirty members of Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., attended the Division campfire at Braintree, and report an enjoyable time.

SOUTH QUINCY.

J. C. Murray's singing class is quite a success.

A gentleman and lady were thrown from a carriage on Hancock street Tuesday, but escaped serious injury.

The horse was frightened by the electric cars.

George M. Sawyer, dealer in groceries and provisions in Hardwick's block, has gone into insolvency.

Timothy O'Brien of the Quincy Co-operative Store received an ugly life in the writ by a horse which he was harnessing on Monday.

Reverend John Brown, who obtained considerable prominence a few months ago by his "Tribune" sensation, and who was causing them to return to work, will lecture in the Presbyterian Church next Monday evening. Proceeds for local charitable purposes.

E. K. King and Son are modeling a beautiful ideal sitting figure of Memory. Life size, for Mills & Chalmers, who will set the statue from Westbury place.

Two weeks ago last Friday, the employees of the International Granite Company surprised the managing partner, Mr. O. H. Hamann, by presenting him with a beautiful bed lounge and clock, on the occasion of his marriage. The presentation was made by Mr. D. A. Thompson, one of the workmen. Mr. Hamann very feelingly thanked them all, and said he did not expect such a tangible proof of their good will.

Republican caucus Saturday evening.

Capt. C. H. Norton is prominently mentioned as a Democratic nominee for the City Council. He would make a good candidate to run at large, having a great many friends in all parts of the city.

Councilman Willard will undoubtedly be renominated by the Republicans, and if possible that Capt. Redman or Mr. Charles L. Coe may replace Councilman Glover of Councilman Burr.

There is need of active work in Ward Six for anti-slavery. The vote last fall was a light one for our fair ward, a large percentage of "Yes" votes being cast in any other ward. There is no danger of the "no" majority in the city being overruled, but all the same Atlantic should do her duty.

At the recent State election but 156 votes were cast, against 204 at the city election. There are 288 names on the Ward Six list, and 250 should go to the polls.

Mrs. Cephas Drew spent the Sabbath in Halifax, having been summoned there to attend the funeral of an uncle.

The attention of our police officers is called to the brutality of the drivers of some of the granite teams. They beat their horses most unmercifully in climbing the rise in Hancock street, to the railroad bridge. If so small a hill cannot be surmounted without halting the horses, better put on a lighter load. If the cruelty continues, and our police do nothing, the society with a long name will be appealed to.

Mr. and Mrs. Thayer have been visiting in Lowell for a few days.

On account of illness, Rev. Mr. Yeoman was unable to attend his duties on Sunday. A service was held however in the morning. Mr. H. B. Benis taking charge and reading one of Spurgeon's sermons. Should the person ever fail us again we hope we may have so able a substitute as Mr. Benis proved to be.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society held its second entertainment and supper Wednesday evening. A large company was present in spite of the storm. Mrs. Coe played the opening piano solo, and Principal Merrick recited "High Tide on the coast of Lincolnshire." Mr. Henry Read favored us with one of his songs which ever charms the hearers. Then four young gentlemen presented the farce "A Male Cook" in a way that reflected great credit on themselves. Redner, Coombs, Harry Parker, Charlie Hammond and Arthur Priest. A song by Mr. Ouedo closed the evening. The grand man must know he is a favorite. The singing closed with a solo and chorus by Bassett, Miss Annie Hall, Messrs. Hall and Merrick. Every part was well rendered throughout the evening. All hail to home talent.

It is stated on authority that Councilman Burr of Ward Six has positively declined to be a candidate for reelection, much to the regret of his many supporters.

Are you going to take your best girl to the G. A. R. fair?

QUINCY POINT.

Dr. Everett made a call of ten in this city for Senators who will be seen below.

Death.

The death of Agnes, daughter of Mr. James C. and Mrs. Agnes Dunn, of Quincy morning last was a great shock to the whole community. She had been ill with typhoid fever for a fortnight, and though many knew that she was sick none thought that she was dangerously so. Agnes was nineteen years of age and the oldest child. She was a graduate of the High School class of '88. In the fall of the same year she entered Thayer Academy at Braintree, and after her death was engaged upon the work of the senior middle grade. She was a young lady of great promise, and her death is a terrible blow to the other members of the family. She was a member of the Congregational Sunday School, Quincy, and a constant attendant at the services. She will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Her funeral took place on Sunday afternoon; Rev. Mr. Norton officiated and spoke fittingly of her exemplary life. The interment was at Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

Personal.

Mr. and Mrs. Robie of Chester, N. H., are the guests of Mrs. John Federhen.

W. S. Redding, Esq., and family left their summer home "The Elms" at the 7th inst. Thursday, the 7th inst. Mr. Redding will be much missed during the winter months.

Mrs. C. B. Newcomb and daughter, Miss L. M. Newcomb, have returned much improved in health from a five weeks' visit in New Jersey.

Master Frederick A. Lapham, who has been ill from an attack of typhoid fever, has almost entirely recovered and is able to be out of doors once more.

Mrs. Lewis Hall of Boston has been the guest of Mrs. Daniel Higgins for the past ten days.

Mrs. Richard Raycroft met with an accident last Saturday, in falling down some stone steps at her home at Church street. She was much bruised, but is recovering slowly.

Burch Notes.

WEST QUINCY.

There were no re-nominations at the hearing of the Committee on Streets on the petition to change the name of Cemetery street to Crescent street, and upon re-nomination of the committee, the Council voted to make the change.

The abusive article in the penny sheet which sought to ridicule the free delivery, needs no reply. What the citizens of West Quincy are the facts, and they are capable of judging for themselves. And the PATRIOT intends to get them the whole truth, and leave it for them to decide what is for their best interest.

Mr. George M. Hobbs is having a two weeks' vacation, and will spend next week in Manchester, N. H.

Twenty wires have been strung on the new Willard street poles.

It is rumored that a new house will be built on the site of James Symonds's colored shop.

Have you guessed on the cake at the store of F. E. Kimball on Crescent street.

Mr. Frank W. Folsom has returned from Milford, N. H.

The Social Union held an enjoyable party, by presenting him with a beautiful bed lounge and clock, on the occasion of his marriage. The presentation was made by Mr. D. A. Thompson, one of the workmen. Mr. Hamann very feelingly thanked them all, and said he did not expect such a tangible proof of their good will.

Free postal delivery would be an injury to West Quincy, it would also be to Quincy and other places. Hyde Park, Woburn, Beverly and other cities and towns report to the contrary notwithstanding. There are those in all places who would not be benefited, but while they are few, there are hundreds who would save a letter carrier's trip. There are many who do not average a letter a week, yet they go to the post office every day and perhaps two or three times. Would not these be benefited? Again there are those who would not be benefited by the letter carrier, but they go to the post-office once a week; say they go Saturday, there is no letter then, but one arrives Monday and must stay in the office until next Saturday. Is that prompt service?

Councilman Willard will undoubtedly be renominated by the Republicans, and if possible that Capt. Redman or Mr. Charles L. Coe may replace Councilman Glover of Councilman Burr.

WOLLASTON.

A large number of people from this village attended the Sunday School convention in Boston this week. The exercises were very interesting.

There is great need of better sidewalks. "The way and the end" will be the subject of Rev. Freeman's sermon in the M. E. Church next Sunday forenoon. Reception to membership to follow. Young people's meeting at 6, praise and prayer service at 7 o'clock.

Tickets to the lecture course are selling well. Rev. Mr. Watkins will give his lecture on the "Rockies" on Wednesday evening next at 7:45 sharp.

It will be decided in favor of the family if persons indebted to the estate of the late Henry Field, will make payment to Mr. C. W. Tucker, the druggist, at their earliest convenience.

Mr. Waterhouse gave his stereopticon entertainment to a large audience in Bedford, Me., last week.

It cannot be denied that there is opposition to Mayor Porter among the Republicans of Ward Five. Whether carried to the polls, or presented him with a beautiful bed lounge and clock, on the occasion of his marriage. The presentation was made by Mr. D. A. Thompson, one of the workmen. Mr. Hamann very feelingly thanked them all, and said he did not expect such a tangible proof of their good will.

Next rehearsal on Wednesday evening. Mr. Henry C. Field the expressman, died at his residence on Farrington street, Sunday, after a four days' illness with pleurisy fever. He was well known in Wollaston musical circles and has composed some music. He was a member of Wollaston Lodge, Knights of Honor, has been in the city for some time.

The Wollaston laundry is now turning out a large number of shirts, and is in business in the regular way.

The petition for a change of the Royal Arcanum has over twenty signatures.

Republican caucus Saturday evening.

There was an enjoyable gathering at the Congregational Church Thursday evening.

The dancing school at Unitarian Hall is now full as to numbers. Owing to the limited capacity of the hall, at Mrs. Buffum's request, the gallery only will be open to parents and friends, directly interested in the pupils.

Next Thursday evening the Unitarian society will hold its regular church social, when a full company is looked for and a general good time for everybody.

Should the person ever fail us again we hope we may have so able a substitute as Mr. Benis proved to be.

President Fehrenbach broke his excellent record of 100 per cent. in attendance, at the special session of the City Council Monday evening; the other absentees were Councilman Burr, Laey, Lovett, Pinkham, and the Mayor.

The meeting was called at the usual time, 7:45 o'clock, but the first hearing was assigned to 8:30, consequently after opening it took a recess until after the appointed hour. Councilman Morse was chosen President pro tempore.

New Willard Schoolhouse, West Quincy.

Plans have been approved for the new sixteen-room brick schoolhouse in Ward Four; the City Council has bought additional land at a cost of $15,800, and on Tuesday evening appropriated $75,000 in premium on notes for the erection of the building. Sturges & Cabot of Boston, are the architects, and I. H. Cushing of Hingham the contractor. From the architect's office comes the following description of the many-plan plan of the first floor: "The plan may not be upon any scale, but it will give the readers some practical idea of the shape of the building and its arrangement." The large figures designate the school rooms. "B1" and "G1," and "G2" for the other rooms. "M" stands for master's room "T" for teachers' room and E & E for entrances. The stairways the second and third floor are at the end of the building between rooms 1 and 2 and between 6 and 7. "S" stands for the entrance, which is practically the same as the ground floor entrance, except over entrance is a room 19x28, one styled recitation room and the other a storage room.

Copeland Street.

In the third floor are six unadorned rooms, one in each L and a large hall 53x121. Rooms 3 and 4 will receive light on the southeast side only; all the others from the southwest and northeast.

The following facts are gleaned from the specifications:

The basement will have a concrete floor and the walls, both brick and stone, white-washed, also the ceiling, exposed timber and plank, except in certain cases. It will be finished with a floor of eight furnaces, play rooms and privies.

Up to the basement window caps, the building will be faced with granite. Above this point, the building will be of brick and granite, and will be roofed with slate and shingles.

No floors will be laid until after the roof is on.

The eaves will have a paper lath and brick facing with Perth Amboy brick.

The interior walls of the two main case wells and of the vent shaft, contained in them, will be of white brick, costing not more than $25 per thousand; also the arches connecting this entrance hall with corridor. No soft bricks will be allowed in a building.

The vestibule and entrance hall on both sides to have unglazed red tiles, the corridors to be of red slate.

The floors will be of furrowed and lathed and plastered two good coats on top of roof pinking, all the main trusses and rafters being left exposed.

The staircases are situated one at each end of the building going from the first to the second floor, and the other coming from the first floor to the basement.

is closed in. The mason is to remove all the cleared timber and other remains of the old Willard school, and may use all the stone which is thoroughly sound.

The basement from three feet below grade up to and including caps of basement windows, to be either split face or natural sap stone of dark red color; all stone above to be coarse crandol.

On the northeast side of building, there will be a stone panel, carved one connecting with the girls' and the other with the boys' playground.

In the halls on the first and second floors, where the fire proof walls come in, double sliding doors of solid pine timber, both sides.

The contractor will provide and set six blackboards for all walls of school room.

The drainage, plumbing, etc., all receive minute consideration.

The building to be piped for gas, with 147 outlets; also for electric lighting with the same number of outlets. The master room is to be connected by call bells and speaking tubes with every school room, and there will be a Smith or equivalent to receive the calls from the school rooms.

A prospective view of the building is being displayed by the PATRIOT later.

CONSUMPTION,

IN its first stages, can be successfully checked by the prompt use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Even in the later periods of this disease, the cough is wonderfully relieved by this medicine.
 "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with the best effect in my practice, my life. I had a constant cough, night sweats, was greatly reduced in flesh, and given up by my physician. One bottle and a half of the Pectoral cured me."—A. J. Lison, M. D., Middleboro, Tennessee.
 "Several years ago I was severely ill.
 The doctors said I was in consumption,
 and that they could do nothing for me,
 but advised me, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine two or three bottles, I was cured, and my health remains good to the present day."—James E. Rich, Dublin, Conn.
 "Several years ago, on a passage home from California, by water, I contracted so severe a cold that for some days I was confined to my state-room, and a physician on board considered my life in danger. Happening to have a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, I used it freely, and my lungs were soon restored to a healthy condition. Since that time I have invariably recommended this preparation."—J. B. Chandler, Junction, Va.

RESIDENCE OF W. P. RICE.

(Editorial Correspondence.)
Fort Payne, Ala., No. 4.
 The above is a fine view of the beautiful residence erected by W. P. Rice, Esq., of Kansas City, a son of Mr. W. W. Rice of Quincy. The house is very finely finished throughout, and is said to have cost $30,000.
 It is situated on elevated ground, on the western side of the city, and is the most costly of any in Fort Payne. Mr.
 Rice is very wealthy and is one of the leading men in the Fort Payne Coal and Iron Company.
 There is a very interesting thing to be seen in the cave. One of the most noted is "Alexander's tomb." It is composed of a stalagmite, which is estimated worth forty tons, and has been ages in the forming. There are several craters, which form the cave.
 This is one of the most remarkable curiosities to be seen at Fort Payne, Alabama. It is situated about half a mile from the main street, and is visited by most of the new comers to this wide-awake city. Just inside the entrance is a large room, capable of accommodating at least two hundred persons. Beyond this, one can go from one to two miles, with ease and pleasure.
 As there is no water dripping from overhead, one can wear nice clothes without getting them dirty or injured. The cave varies in height from ten to twenty-five feet, therefore the visitor is not obliged to stoop or hit his head, as in several caves
 the writer has visited.
 More anon. G. W. P.

ENTRANCE TO MANITOU CAVE.

Household Receipts.

GRAHAM GEMS. One cupful of Graham flour, one cupful of sugar, one cupful of milk, one-third cupful of butter, a tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of baking powder. For rye gems use rye flour instead of Graham. For flour gems use two cupfuls of flour.
 COOKIES. Take two cups of sugar, one cup of molasses, one cup of sour cream, half a cup of butter, one teaspoon each
 of baking powder, salt, soda, flour to make a stiff batter.
 CREAM POTATOES. Put two tablespoonfuls of butter into a frying pan, when hot rub into it smoothly a spoonful of flour, but do not let it brown; add a cupful of rich milk, and when it boils, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, pepper and salt;
 then the potatoes, chopped, but not too fine, boil up well and serve at once. Delicious with roast meats, or as a breakfast dish with rolls and coffee.
 SOFT Gingerbread. Take one egg, one cupful of molasses, one cup of sour cream,
 half a cup of butter, one teaspoon each
 of baking powder, salt, soda, flour to
 make a stiff batter.
 TWO apples kept in a cake box will keep moderately rich cake moist a great length of time, if the apples are renewed without.

Letter from Quincy.

The following is an extract from a correspondence to the Maryland Journal. It was written by a lady who resides in this city and as it is quite interesting we take pleasure in giving it to our readers.
 "Eight miles south from Boston we find
 'Miller Hill,' near Newington River, on Shawmut Branch Old Colony R. R., and contains many very elegant residences and parks, and has a decidedly English air to its broad lawns and noble trees. Fine views of the sea and harbor can be seen from almost any point on 'Miller Hill.'
 The principal street, 'Adams,' passes down through Quincy, a city on the Old Colony R. R., with several villages and a long coast line; has a population of 15,000.
 Quincy holds many of Boston's most famous and beautiful residences, and the views of the sea and harbor can be seen
 from almost any point on 'Miller Hill.'

THE PHANTOM SHIP.
The Hulk Buried in the Sands of Colorado Desert Out of Man's Reach.
Who has not heard of the phantom ship of California, whose hulk is buried in the sands of the desert, and whose spectral masts have lured many treasure seekers to destruction? At the time of its discovery, several years ago, the press raved about it, historians speculated upon it, songsters sang it, novelists wrote it with romances, and Joaquin Miller, the long haired rhymester of the Sierras—dropping into poetry with the facility of Silas Wegg—celebrated it in these words:
And said, a ship lies yonder, dead;
And said, double loons lie down in sand;
In yon far desert, dead and brown,
Beyond where waves washed walls look down,
As thick as stars o'erhead;
A great ship, lifting from the sand
And pointing heavenward a hand.
This mysterious vessel lies not far north of the line between Upper and Lower California, in what is known as the Colorado desert, and has just been rediscovered by a party of prospectors. It was first seen by Joseph Talbot, who gives it as his opinion that the desert in which it was stranded was once a part of the California gulf, but that at some remote period an earthquake threw up the chain of hills across its mouth, entirely altering the character of the country. The waters gradually subsided, but their mark was still plainly seen some sixty or seventy feet up the mountain sides, all around the border. The ship may have been a piratical craft which lost her way; she may have been the very vessel named by Admiral Vizcaino, and mentioned by Father Junipero Serra. She may have been a ship of exploration, commanded by some Castilian grandee, which disappeared in the Seventeenth century with 1,000,000 doubloons on board. None can now tell any thing about her beyond the bare fact that there she is in the midst of the desert—'lifting heavenward a hand.'

Though many have tried, no man has yet been able to reach the spot. For miles around it on every side, the alkali crust that covers the deep, hot, stinging sand is not strong enough to support man or beast. There is no water for a great distance; and if a man could wade through on foot, where it is impossible to compel a mule to carry him, he could not be burdened with sufficient food and water to last him through the expedition, without which he must surely perish. Last year two determined miners were sent out, equipped with shovels, tools and "grab stake" to dig up the craft and its treasure.
Time passed; they did not return, and finally others were sent to look for them, after the fashion of parties who go in search of the north pole and others who go in search of them. The latter, coming in sight of the tall white masts, found a pile of fossils and marine shells—a monument erected by those for whom they were looking; and later they came upon two human skeletons, presumably those of the miners, the flesh picked clean from the bones by greedy vultures.—Philadelphia Record.

Porous Waterproofing Cloth.
A porous waterproof cloth is the best for outer garments during wet weather for those whose duties and labor causes them to perspire freely. The best way for preparing such cloth is by the process adopted for the tunics of the French soldiers during the Crimea war. It is as follows: Take 25 pounds of alum and dissolve in ten gallons of boiling water; then, in a separate vessel, dissolve the same quantity of sugar of lead in ten gallons of water, and mix the two solutions. The cloth is now well handled in this liquid, and every part of it is penetrated; then it is squeezed or dried in the air or in a warm apartment; then washed in cold water and dried again, when it is fit for use. If necessary the cloth may be dipped in the liquid and dried twice before being washed. The liquor appears curdled when the alum and lead solutions are mixed together. This is the result of double decomposition, the sulphate of lead, which is an insoluble salt, being formed. The sulphate of lead is taken up in the pores of the cloth, and it is unaffected by rains or moisture, and yet it does not render the cloth air tight. Such cloth is also partly inflammable. A solution of alum itself will render cloth, prepared as described, partly waterproof, but it is not so good as the sulphate of lead. Such cloth—cotton or woolen—sheds rain like the feathers on the back of the duck. As to cost, alum is 1 1/2d. per pound, and sugar of lead 8d. per pound, and doubtless each could be had for less in quantities. Experience will tell the amount of liquor necessary for, say, a score of capes; but anyway, the process will be found to be sufficiently inexpensive and effectual.—London Field.

Instantaneous Force of Dynamite.
Dynamite is so instantaneous in its action that a green leaf can be compressed into the hardest steel before it has time to flatten. One of the experiments at the United States Torpedo works was to place some leaves between two heavy, flat pieces of iron, set them on a firm foundation, and see what gun cotton would do in forcing the iron plates together. A charge was placed upon them by compressing the gun cotton into a cylindrical form about one inch thick and three or four inches in diameter, through the center of which a hole is made for a cap of fulminate of mercury, by which the gun cotton is exploded. The reaction was so great, from merely being exploded in the open air, that one of the iron pieces was driven down upon the other so quickly and with such force that it caught an impression of the leaves before they could escape.—Portland Transcript.

SYKES' TALE OF WOE.
The Sorrows of a Young Hunter Who Went Out with a New Gun.
Henry Sykes, a young man of this town, went hunting a few days ago. He had a fine new double barreled shotgun, and wished to distinguish himself at shooting ducks. About fifteen miles below here on the Ohio river in a marshy spot wild ducks are frequently found. A friend told Sykes of this place. The railroad runs near it, and Sykes went down in the morning before day. He hired a countryman to take him out in a small skiff and at dawn they were watching for the ducks. They paddled around a quietly for about two hours, but saw no ducks. Sykes began to grow impatient, but the monotony was interrupted by an event. The boat was old and the timber was rotten. The countryman incautiously ran it against a snag. A big hole was stove in the bottom, and it immediately filled and sank. The water was not over waist deep, but Sykes in his tumble dropped his fine gun. After a half hour's groping in the muddy water it was found and they waded to land.
Sykes dried his clothes and his gun, put in a new load and concluded that he had enough of duck hunting. He thought he would try squirrel shooting, as the forest ran down to the water's edge, and his boatman told him squirrels were abundant in it. He entered the forest and hunted until noon without seeing a squirrel. Then he found that he was lost. After two hours' wandering and nothing to eat he came to a house and was told how to get to the railway station. He was also informed that in the fields on the way there was some good quail shooting.

Sykes came to one of the fields described, and thought that he might yet redeem himself by popping over a few brace of quail. He climbed over the fence and made his way through some stubble, expecting to scare up some game. A herd of sheep was feeding in the field. An old ram was at the head of the herd, and when he saw Sykes he opened hostile demonstrations. With head down he started on a run for the hunter. Sykes was badly frightened. He thought it would be better to kill the ram than be killed by him. So he raised his gun and discharged both barrels at the coming catapult. His hand trembled so that all the shot flew wide. Then he turned to run and the ram struck him a glancing blow, which tossed him into the stubble on his face and sent his gun flying from his hands. Abandoning his weapon he sprang to his feet and ran for the fence, pursued by the ram. He was knocked down again, but finally managed to reach the fence and scrambled over into safety. He found that he was considerably bruised, but not hurt.
Sykes threw stones at the ram for a while and wondered how he was going to get his gun back. After considerable searching he found the house of the man who owned the field. The farmer sent the hired man back with him, and they obtained the gun. It was two miles to the railway station. Sykes shouldered his gun and started for it, still aching from his adventures. He determined to sell his gun as soon as he got back to the city, and never go hunting again. He came in sight of the station just in time to see the last Louisville train pass. He yelled and worked his handkerchief, but the train did not stop. At this last misfortune Sykes broke down. He sat on the depot platform and actually shed tears. There was no hotel at the little station, and he spent the night at a little farm house near by. He did not sleep any, for the mosquitoes riddled his unprotected face, and it was covered with bumps the next morning. He got up at daylight, determined not to miss the first Louisville train, although it was not due for three hours, and waited in the depot until it arrived. Then he came to Louisville, hunted up a doctor, sold his new gun for half price and related his tale of woe.—Louisville Telegram.

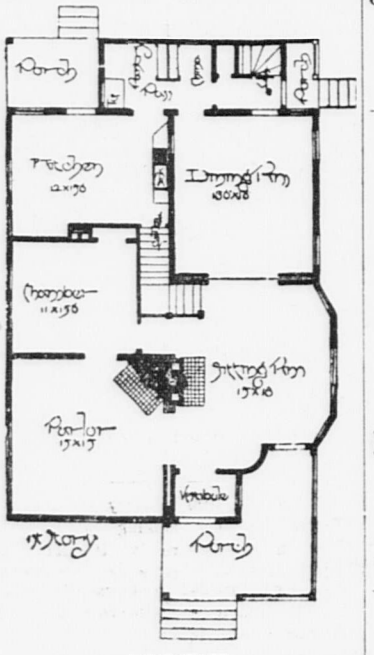

A Chinese Physician.
A celebrity among the Chinese of San Francisco is their great doctor, Li Po Tai. He has been in this country nearly thirty years, and has a larger income from his profession than any white practitioner in the city. His patients all come to the office when able, and Li Po Tai sits, habited in gorgeous silk and brocades, in a little den of an office overlooking the plaza, and feels pulses all day long. The patients are mostly white people, who come to him after varied rounds of their own physicians, or at the instigation of some resuscitated and enthusiastic patients.
Li Po Tai rests the patient's elbows on a blue silk cushion, and proceeds to feel their right pulse with his three hooked and long clawed fingers. He feels the right pulse to ascertain the condition of the brain, stomach and kidneys, and then grasps the left wrist to find out about the heart, liver and lungs. Although he knows practically nothing of anatomy as our physicians know it, he makes a wonderful diagnosis of a case. He charges $10 a week for his services, including his medicines, and patients either come to his office and drink the tinctures or take packages of mysterious stuff home and make their own hot drinks.
Li Po Tai has many notions that puzzle and interest his patients. He commands them not to eat shellfish or uncooked fruit, to let alone poultry, fried meats, eggs, watery vegetables, all liquors and everything sour. For thirty years Li Po Tai has made his patients drink hot water. His income from his profession is estimated at more than $5,000 per month.—San Francisco Letter.

The Age for Consumption.
Consumption is rare in childhood, but increases rapidly after the age of 15, and is most common between the ages of 25 and 30. Those who escape it till the latter age are less and less prone to it as they advance in years, and may escape it entirely, even though they may have a hereditary predisposition to it.—New York Telegram.

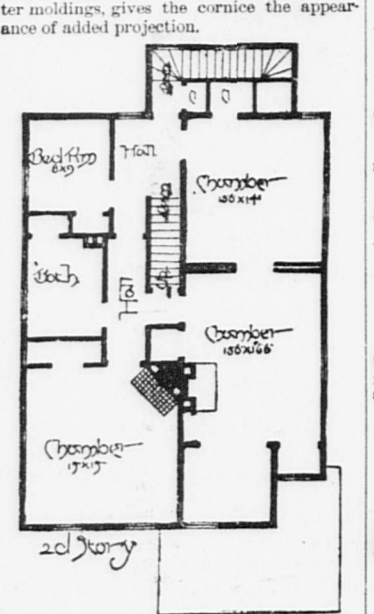

A SENSIBLE FARM HOUSE.
Original Plans and Description by Architect L. H. Gibson.
In making a plan for a farm dwelling it is in the mind of many that it should be distinct in son's respects from a town or suburban dwelling. The principal difference, however, is largely in the matter of convenience. In the plan which is here submitted there is a front vestibule, in which may be placed wraps, etc., before going into the sitting room. There is a rear vestibule from whence one may pass from the kitchen, dining room or rear porch to the second floor. In this vestibule is a low closet and a space for a hat rack. In front there is a parlor, with a grate in it, the smoke from which enters the same stack but not the same flue as the one in the sitting room. There is a bedroom which may be approached either from the sitting room or parlor. The latter door is not necessary, and could be omitted and afford better space for that room. It is to be noticed that there is a closet in connection with this chamber. The stairway to the second floor goes to the sitting room. The approach is to a square landing and from thence to the second floor. From the kitchen one passes to the cellar under the front stairway. The usual kitchen conveniences, which have been common to the plans furnished by the writer, are herein included. The rear porch could be inclosed with lattice work to an advantage.
On the second floor are four bedrooms, an alcove, a bathroom and a large number of ample closets. In one instance this house was built with sliding doors between the two side chambers, as indicated by this plan. Attention is called to the large store closet in the rear hall. There is an attic stairway to the second floor in the position indicated in second floor plan.
This house was built in frame at a cost indicated by the schedule which is given. It makes an exceedingly picturesque structure, well adapted to a country house.
In painting, it is suggested that the first story be a rich buff, the second story a lighter, more yellow color, the body of the gables a light orange tint. The trimmings and shutters, to unite this combination, should be a dark olive green. The under side of the porch ceiling should be the same tint as the gable. By trimmings is meant the exterior window and other casings, the porch columns, balusters and rail and gutters molding. The under side of the cornice should be painted same color as second story body. This, with the dark color to the gutter moldings, gives the cornice the appearance of added projection.

The New and Better Way.

The following form for the arrangement of pictures in the family album, has been copyrighted. Persons adhering to it will save the stereotyped explanations usually given to callers as they turn the leaves:—

No. 1. "Understood to be 'my father,' you know, now in his seventieth year. Nice old man, but rather set in his ways."

No. 2. "That's grandma—sixty-five years old and as spry as a cricket. Coming out to see us next fall. Didn't turn gray until she was sixty."

No. 3. "Oldest sister Minnie—lives in Cincinnati—five children—keeps three servants—cataract in the left eye."

No. 4. "That? Oh, that's my brother Ben, taken just after he got well. He's out in Denver now. We think he's engaged."

No. 5. "My sister Jessie's four children in a group. Aren't they cunning? Jessie lives in Chicago. We don't think she is happy with her husband, but she never lets on, you know."

No. 6. "My cousin Bella—lives in Wisconsin—rather conceited and uppish. We used to write, but don't now."

No. 7. "My Uncle William of Massachusetts. He's rich and we expect he'll leave us his money. Queer old duck, and we have to use him tenderly."

No. 8. "Oh, yes! That picture doesn't belong in there, that's my Aunt Sarah, but she's dead. Been dead five years, but we kind o' keep the picture around. She didn't amount to much. Just ordinary, you know."

No. 9. "One of my girl friends. She thinks she's good looking, but she isn't. I'm mad at her just now, and I keep it in here for spite."

No. 10. "One of my fellers. The picture isn't near as good looking as he is. We were engaged, but his mother broke it up."

Nos. 11, 12, 13, 14 and 15. "Aunts, uncles, cousins and other folks, who don't amount to much, but have been put in to fill up."—Detroit Free Press.

Impure Water.

The growing popular knowledge of invisible impurities and the deepening impression upon the minds of the people, of the necessity of a pure water supply, have caused a demand for a simple and convenient test. As yet there is no certain and reliable test by chemical analysis. The following tests are recommended: "Fill a perfectly clean quart bottle half full of water, cork and shake it; remove the cork and see if any odor can be detected at the mouth of the bottle. Cork the bottle again and put into a warm place for a few hours, or set into a pan of hot water for an hour. Shake, uncork, and again test by smell. If an unpleasant or faint or musty odor is perceptible, the water requires more minute investigation. The second simple test is to evaporate a quart of water to dryness in a new tin pan or cup, and note the character of the residue, and what happens when it is strongly heated in a metal spoon. If the sediment left after evaporation is small, and on being burned in a metal spoon gives rise only to such an odor as comes from burning vegetable matter, the water is not greatly contaminated with sewage. But if the sediment is in considerable quantity, dark in color and burns, giving off the peculiar odor of burning hair or other animal matter, then the water is foul."

His Smoke was Immense.

He had built a street railway from the town depot to the town court house, a distance of half a mile, and had put on a couple of bottled cars, each propelled by a seal brown mule. He had, further, opened a headquarters office and secured a clerk, and the "bobs" made their first successful trips his bosom swelled with pride, and he turned to his young man with the observation: "The road has a name—'The Rushville Street Railway and Transit Company'—but it seems proper that I should have a title. Have you thought of the matter?" "I have, sir," was the prompt reply, "and I beg to submit the title: 'President, Secretary and Treasurer of the Rushville Street Railway and Transit Company and General Manager of the Western Hemisphere.'"

"Splendid idea!" exclaimed the president, and the printing was at once ordered.—New York Sun.

Honey as a Cure for Diphtheria.

The following has appeared in one or two bee papers, and is without doubt very efficacious in throat troubles: "Make a quart of red pepper tea, and after straining, add a tablespoonful of common salt. Then sweeten with honey to suit the palate (using extracted honey), and gargle as often as possible, always keeping the tea before the fire so as to have it lukewarm. The pepper and salt are the knives that do the cutting, and the honey heals the wounds. In extreme cases, a dose of oil will help much at first."—Evangelist.

RAILROAD STATISTICS. The total number of miles of railroads in the United States at the close of 1888 was 150,082, of which 7,028 miles were built during the year. The number of locomotives in service was 29,308; passenger cars, 28,252; freight cars, 1,005,116. This is an increase during the year of 1548 locomotives, 1,388 passenger cars and 48,485 freight cars. In the Dominion of Canada there are reported to be 12,701 miles in operation, on which there are 1,657 locomotives, 1912 passenger cars and 44,009 freight cars.

There has been a reduction in the number of steamships plying between San Francisco and China.

Our Fast Living.

A correspondent of a New York paper writes: "An English woman at forty-five looks younger and more wholesome than an American of thirty. Americans eat, drink and live too fast. Ice cream and ice water give them enormous corporations. Tight lacing to keep down the stomach ruins their digestions and complexions, and powder, paint and cosmetics complete the wreck. In many parts of the country, no doubt, the dreadful extremes of temperature, as compared to the comparatively equable climate the Englishman is always complaining about, have a great deal to do with this early decay, but probably plenty of ill cooked food and the great American pie, with ice cream and ice water, should bear most of the blame."—Herald of Health.

An Elegant Private Park.

George W. Vanderbilt of New York has begun to put to use the extensive property that he has lately been purchasing near Asheville, N. C. Frederick Law Olmsted, the landscape artist, is laying out the immense ground into a park, which is intended to be one of the most beautiful pieces of landscape in the world. Beside miles of drives, it will contain artificial lakes, fountains, groves, meadows and other features worthy of the finest public parks. At the same time Richard M. Hunt, the architect, is preparing to construct in the heart of the domain one of the most elegant residences that art, skill and money can devise and create. Mr. Vanderbilt's ownings there aggregate 5000 acres, and the estate is to be a private residence for Mr. Vanderbilt.

Dyeing Kills the Hair.

A barber says to the Cincinnati Enquirer: Hair dyeing is not entirely a feminine fad or vice, whichever you like to call it. It is exceptional for men to take the trouble and suffer the annoyance and even pain which continual bleaching and dyeing entail. Ladies generally prefer gold, but men who are dissatisfied with the natural color of their hair almost invariably go in for black. To keep up the deception, too, if not three, applications a week are necessary, and one man was visited every alternate day for over three years. Dyeing the hair kills it in time, and makes it brittle and thin during the process, while the number of scalp diseases sacrificed at the shrine of vanity is legion. Several barbers now decline all dyeing business as the acids used are so strong that they positively make the fingers sore.

Precocious Youngsters.

It would be ludicrous were it not so painful to see how old are the children of today. While walking the other day I was dumb struck in this wise. Two little boys in round jackets approached a daintily dressed little girl of seven. One, touching his cap to her with Chesterfieldian grace, drew forward the blushing owner of the other round jacket, saying: "Allow me, Miss Almira, to present to you my friend, Mr. Smith." The little lady recognized Mr. Smith after the most approved adult fashion, and I went on my way "a sadder but a wiser" woman. Before I had time to recover from this I heard a boy of six ask a little girl of ten: "Mary, what do you think of the men?" Mary, bridling with edifying indignation, answered: "Haven't I told you repeatedly, sir, never to ask me that question?" Judging from present symptoms, kites, hoops, dolls and balls will be in small request in a few years. Male babies in the cradle will then smoke cigars and female babies will cry for a little husband instead of a lump of sugar.

CHANGE IN STAMPS. The new postage stamps which soon go into use, will be about one-eighth smaller than the present stamps, and the same size as the English and other European issues. The one cent stamp will be blue as at present, the two-cent carmine, the three-cent royal purple, the four-cent chocolate, the five-cent light brown, the six-cent vermilion, the ten-cent green, the fifteen-cent steel blue, the thirty-cent black, and the ninety-cent orange.

WHITMAN. Two companies want to build an electric railway at Whitman. The route proposed by the first company is from the east end to Auburnville, while that of the other company is from the east end to the Brockton line. The capital stock of the first-named company has been placed at $30,000, and of the latter at $40,000. A large portion of the $30,000 has been subscribed.

CONTEMPLATED. Agitation has begun in the matter of an electric street railroad between North Middleboro and Middleboro. Such a means of transfer is a handy thing to have in a town.

IT is stated that a millionaire who died recently at Vienna had such antipathy to darkness that he left instructions in his will for the illumination of his tomb. An electric light is to be kept burning in the vault during a whole year, and even the interior of the coffin is to be electrically lighted.

AN ELECTRIC ROAD. The selectmen granted the Randolph and Holbrook Light and Power Company a franchise to operate a plant in that town as petitioned for by the company. One of the conditions is that the work of building the electric railroad shall be commenced before the first day of April next, and the selectmen have received a guarantee to that effect. The company propose to use the Thompson-Houston system.

His Three Sons.

AN OLD FARMER TESTS HIS BOYS TO SEE WHICH SHALL HAVE THE FARM.

Once upon a time an old man called his three sons to him in the dusk of the evening, and in a faltering voice said to them: "My boys, in a little while you will have no father. I am standing on the shore of the river of death and soon I must launch my boat upon it. Now, I have, as you know, a splendid farm, upon which one man can thrive, but as there are three of you I have been sorely perplexed as to which should have it. I have therefore decided to give each of you $2 that you must spend tomorrow, and to the one making the wisest purchase shall the farm be given. Come to me tomorrow evening at this time and tell me how you have each expended your money. Now, good night, and heaven bless you all."

On the following evening the three sons assembled before their father. "Reginald," said the latter to the eldest, "what did you purchase with your two dollars?" "Father," returned the son, "I pondered long that I might make wise use of the money, and at last I bought a pair of strong shoes."

"Well done, well done; the journey through life is rugged and hard, and the thorns are thick upon the way. You have shown prudence and forethought and I love you the better for it. And what did you buy, Augustus?"

"I too, thought long and deeply," responded the second son, "that I might not purchase anything trivial or foolish. Since the cap that I wear is worn and ragged, I bought a hat with a wide brim, which I show to you, my father."

The old man regarded him with a glance of pride and affection, and said: "You too have done well, Augustus; often in this world the brow is fevered and the sun rays beat fiercely upon the aching head, and your hat will comfort you. I rejoice that my sons are so wise. And you, Theophilus, what did you buy?"

"My father," answered Theophilus, "I didn't ponder worth a cent. I do not covet the farm, and my one thought was to keep you with us as long as possible. So I bought two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a present for you, and I am sure that it will keep you in good health and give you strength to till the farm for many years to come."

With tears of joy streaming down his furrowed face the venerable man embraced Theophilus, and murmured in a voice hoarse with emotion: "If I have a farm as large as Texas, with a windmill on it, when I die it shall be yours!" And then Reginald and Augustus moved sadly away into the gathering gloom, and while the one tried to keep the flies off himself with his hat the other kicked himself severely with his boots.

Wedding Etiquette.

The best man and groom await the bride in the chancel. They, as well as the ushers wear Prince Albert coats, not dress suits. After seating the guests—the bride's family and friends in the pews on the left side of the middle aisle, the groom's friends and family on the right side—the ushers walk up the aisle in a body, preceding the entire bridal party. The maid-of-honor comes next. As it is her duty to hold the bride's bouquet during the ceremony, she may or may not carry one of her own, but her hands should be free in any event, to assist the bride in taking off her glove for the ring.

The bride walks in immediately after the maid-of-honor, there being no bridesmaids. If there were bridesmaids, they come after the maid-of-honor and before the bride. The bride leans on the arm of father, brother, or mother, if the former two relatives are not living, or she may come up the aisle entirely alone, as the daughter of a bishop did recently.

Her father was to perform the ceremony, and so awaited her in the chancel with the groom and best man. This young lady did not carry a bouquet, but an ivory prayer book held in both hands. If she wore a bouquet at all, it was suspended at her side by a ribbon or chain, which would be a good device where the bride desires to hold the flowers during the reception. Dress-suits are not seen at any wedding that occurs before 6 o'clock in the evening.

The best man wears evening dress; the brother of the bride (who is not the best man if he takes the bride into the church) wears evening dress. There is no difference at any wedding between the correct dress for the usher and these other functionaries at an evening wedding.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Indigestion

It is not only a distressing complaint, of itself, but, by causing the blood to become depraved and the system enfeebled, is the parent of innumerable maladies. That Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best cure for Indigestion, even when complicated with Liver Complaint, is proved by the following testimony from Mrs. Joseph Lake, of Brockway Centre, Maine:
"Liver complaint and indigestion made my life a burden and came near ending my existence. For more than four years I suffered under agony, was reduced almost to skeleton, and hardly had strength to dress myself alone. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within the time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Nothing that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an improvement in my condition. My appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life."

High Unto Thanksgiving.

The child November days have come with weather strips and grates; The careful housewife battles "round." The boys look up their stockings; And on the table in our homes, The buckwheat's sun-baked cheer Brings joy to the young hearts May know but cannot name.

The age and the "rheumatism" Are playing side by side, And in the open fireplace Crackles the anthracite. The dead dry leaves are making by, The doctor smiles again, And thinks of colds and cramps and coughs Which come in Winter's train.

The farmer looks his apples o'er And puts the prices higher; The flies just give their legs a shake And nestle near the fire, The rabbit sniffs the "coming man," And leaves his wonted haunts, The bicyclist puts by his steed And dons his longer pants.

Upon the fences far and near We read with inward thrill, "For All the People's Dilemma" "Use Mullin's Duplex Pill." The plunger dreams of sudden frost, And twirls his massive chain; The gouty man proclaims a storm, His feet proclaim a rain.

The schoolboy, with the calendar, Sits counting up the days, To see what time Thanksgiving comes, And then goes out and plays; The prudent housewife counts again The cost of scalisk sauce; Her husband takes his Fall coat down, And has her back the back.

With elder juice from Folly fruit The press is running o'er, The gentle grocer doctors up "The lot he has in store." "As the supply is short," And far and near, with wondrous ills, This wondrous month is fraught.

But never mind, we're still enough And good things now abound, So let's let the population of Quincy today, now the population is 55,000, it seems almost incredible to a staid New England gentleman, who has never been 1,000 miles from home, to believe a city of thirty miles from home.

Household Receipts.
MOUNTAIN HOUSE HILL. Set a thin sponge with wheat flour at about four o'clock as follows: Stir into a quart of water flour enough to make a thick batter, adding a half-cup of compressed yeast dissolved. Let this sponge stand till nine o'clock, and then knead with flour, add a piece of butter the size of a large egg. Let the rolls stand till morning, then roll them out as thin as your hands, handle the dough as little as possible, cut it into narrow strips, lay in a pan to rise for three-quarters of an hour, and cook in a quick oven ten minutes. These rolls are delicious made of paragon or of whole wheat flour.

A COFFEE PUDDING. Two large table-spoons of butter, a small cup of sugar, one cup of milk, two well beaten eggs, two cups of flour and three table-spoons of baking powder, or two of cream tartar, and one of soda. Bake in a square pan and cut in slices. Serve with a liquid sauce.

TO COOK TURTLE BEEF. Season a thick steak with pepper and salt and fry slowly in a little lard; turn it often so that both sides are cooked alike; when well browned, add a small quantity of water, half a sliced onion, some minced parsley and thyme; thicken with a spoonful of flour, cover close and leave for an hour on the back of the stove, where it may simmer slowly; then add a pound of corn, a sprinkling of pepper, and add dumplings. Cook about an hour.

FRUIT CAKE. Five eggs, one-half cup of milk, five cups of flour, favoring to taste, three cups of sugar, one cup of butter, one-half pound of raisins, one-half pound of currants. Work butter and sugar to a cream, add the eggs well beaten, the flour, and sift the flour, stirring thoroughly; fold the raisins and currants and stir in last. Bake slowly in a moderate oven two hours.

BANANA CHARLOTTE. This is simple and refreshing. The sides of a quart mold are to be lined with sponge cake, and the sides are coated with raisins, which will be soaked in a little water. Fill the mold with stiff whipped cream. Set it aside in the ice box till wanted. Remove carefully from the mold, and serve.

CHICKEN POT PIE. Wash and cut chicken, and boil for fifteen minutes, then take out and put in a kettle with several slices of salt pork and two or three cups of water, one tablespoon of butter, a sprinkling of pepper, and add dumplings. Let cook about an hour.

ANECDOTES.
Merchant—"You think your son would make us a satisfactory errand boy, do you?"

Mrs. Moriarty—"Whatever he do, sir, 'e do it very quick."

Merchant (turning to boy)—"James, take this note up to Captain Centergut at the ball-grounds and be back in twenty minutes."

Mrs. Moriarty—"Never mind, Jimmy. Come home. It's not a lye they're wanting; it's an angel."

Mrs. Gigglesbee—"Doctor, there is something the matter with my tongue; it pains me badly at times, and I don't know what to do for it."

Physician—"Place a little cotton pillow under it between meals; it may be tired and need rest."

Mrs. Gigglesbee—"But I couldn't talk then."

Physician—"That is why I prescribe the pillow."

Brave as a Lion—"See that armless man over there? He's the bravest man in the city."

"Why?"

"Why, when the highwaymen jumped on the train and took us to hold up our hands, he was the only fellow that didn't do it."

Temperance.

Furnished for publication by the W. C. T. U.

Address of A. P. Peabody, D. D.

If you learn to depend on liquor to enhance social gatherings you will find in later life, that you cannot enjoy the most brilliant society without some stimulus to the inner man. A man addicted to the habit of drink is less self-reliant and capable of doing himself justice, though he may never go to excess. If you yield to the temptation to strong drink, you will be led to gambling and other vices which are perhaps never found in abstainers. Drinking is also an expensive habit, and tempts a man to get money in any way he can. Indulgence in any degree brings you into the class who drink still more, so that if you make a beginning you are apt to reach the bitter end before long. I would remind you, also, that most liquors now are adulterated with poisonous drugs. I have spoken of the perils to which you expose yourself by strong drink and I believe that you who would preserve yourself from these dangers, by joining this league will look back in after years, with devout gratitude. In the highest point of view, in the culture of your immortal nature, you have chosen the better course, and you should make it your life purpose always to preserve the better way, and fix yourselves in the eternal principles of right.

(Concluded.)
(Editorial Correspondence.)
Fort Payne, Ala.—Nov. 5.

After spending several days in this glorious "New England city," nearly all of our party started in the seven vestibule cars, which brought us from Boston to Denison, Texas. The weather was most delightful, and the scenery to many of our party, who were from New England, was new and attractive.

Fort Payne is the northeastern corner of the State, and by the Queen and Crescent route, were carried across the State of Alabama, in a southerly direction. The principle city we passed was Birmingham, which has grown most wonderfully during the last six years. It had in 1880 not half the population Quincy has today, now the population is 55,000, it seems almost incredible to a staid New England gentleman, who has never been 1,000 miles from home, to believe a city of thirty miles from home.

One Dozen Don'ts.

Don't tell the faults or cute sayings of your child in his presence.
Don't say, "Oh, do hush up!" or, "Don't bother me with so many questions," when a child questions you. If he asks for the sake of knowing, answer him though he ask "seventy times seven" questions per day; and teach him to remember what you tell him.

When you promise a child something, don't forget to fulfill the promise to the letter. If you are not scrupulous to do just as you agree you may expect the little one to set you down as false, and learn to be thus himself.

Don't trample, mercilessly under foot, the wishes of a child; but respect them as far as possible.
Don't be constantly menacing a child with, "I'll whip you," or "I'll put a stick over you." Let your promise of chastisement and infliction of the same be of seldom occurrence, but if you promise, keep your promise.

Don't punish a child in anger, but let him know that you dislike the task, but perform it for his good. Don't ever let him see in your face the "I'm-bigger-than-you-and-you've-got-to-stand" spirit.
Don't manifest a spirit of partiality. Children are sure to detect this.

Don't encourage in a small child that for which you will punish him when older.
Don't do and say things for the sake of causing him to show anger and then scold because he does so.

Don't feel it beneath your dignity to give the child the reason for a refusal, if practicable so to do; if it is not, your former conduct should have inspired such confidence toward you that he will cheerfully submit, though he does not understand your motives.
Don't deceive or frighten (by bug bears) children into obedience.—N. E. Farmer.

A Handkerchief Specialist.

The other morning, as the departing Cunard steamship was casting off its lines and swinging out into the stream, an elderly-looking business man hastily embraced a lady, who was one of the passengers, and rushed down the gang plank to the wharf.
Going up hurriedly to a melancholy loafer, who was watching the busy crowd, the gentleman drew him behind a pile of freight and said:

"Want to earn a dollar?"
"You bet."

"You see that lady in black on the bridge there?"
"Cert."

"Well, that's my wife going to Europe. Now, of course, she'll expect me to stand here for the next twenty minutes, while the steamship is backing and filling around so as to wave my handkerchief and watch her out of sight. See?"

"I catch on, boss."

"Well, I'm too busy to fool around here; stock to buy, biz to attend to. She's a little near-sighted, so I'll just hire you to wave this handkerchief instead. It's a big one with a red border, and as long as she sees it she'll think it's me. Come up to 222 Wall street when they are well off and I'll pay you."

"S'posin' she looks through a telescope or sniffs?"

"In that case you'll have to bury your face in the handkerchief and do the great weep act."

"That'll be fifty cents extra."

"All right. Time is money. Look sharp, now! You can kiss your hands a few times at, say, one dime per kiss," and snatching his watch the over-driven business man rushed off.

We print this affecting little incident to call attention to the fact that the man thus employed has gone into the business regularly. He is now a professional fawler, and business men and others can save valuable time, and yet give their departing relatives an enthusiastic send-off, by applying to the above specialist any stormy day. Go early and avoid the rush.—Puck.

Didn't Know the Word.

At the recent laying of a corner stone for a new Episcopal church in this diocese, the sensibilities of the white robed clergy were somewhat shocked by the well intended but decidedly unclerical remark of a newspaper reporter, who had been sent out to make a report on the ceremony. The reporter arrived on the scene a little late, as reporters sometimes do, and applied to the first minister he came across for an account of the proceedings. The minister kindly told him about it, and in the course of his narrative used the somewhat unfamiliar and possibly unauthorized expression: "The bishop then hallowed the stone." "Wait a moment, please," said a newspaper man, who had run behind in taking his notes. "You say the bishop hallowed the stone; why, its some kind of telephone stone ain't it? Yes, I see, it's when you call up central. Go on with the story." But the accommodating minister did not go on. He looked bewildered for a moment and then turned away, more in sadness than in wrath. He was around at the newspaper office a couple of hours later, however, to see that they had that word spelled correctly.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Hard Chance for the Housework.

"At home Tuesdays in March from 3 until 6 o'clock," read a simple minded old lady on the wedding cards of a young couple of her acquaintance. "Well, well," she said, deprecatingly, "Carrie was always an awful girl to go, but I did think she'd stop her gadding round and settle down after she married; but this looks like she expected to go it worse than ever when she has to send out notice that she won't be at home but three hours a week. Great housekeeping she'll do at that rate! I pity her husband!"—Chicago Advance.

The Bridgewater Public Library has a record of all the deaths in that town which have occurred for the past 200 years. The names are alphabetically arranged. The record is complete to July 1st of this year, and was compiled by the late Thomas Cushman.

THE RISING SUN STOVE POLISH.

Beware of paint and paste polish said to be labor saving, self-shining, etc., which stain the hands, pit the iron, and fill the house with a poisonous and sickening odor when heated. Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with inflammable liquid stove polish, paints and enamels in bottles. "The Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass package with every purchase.

FUR.

Stylish cloaks for slender young ladies, are made in nun or peasant shapes, of cloth in new colors of tan, gray, crimson, dahlia, Eifel brown or old rose, and lined with fur, the kinds most used being squirrel lock or fawn lamb, though a minority of expensive garments are made warm by mink. Extremely jaunty and much more generally purchased coverings, are seal skin jackets beautifully fitted to the figure, and combined with astrakhan or otter which is let down the back in V shape, trims the cuffs and lines the collar that may be turned up to show such uniting. Turned up collars are in truth a feature of the season, and will bring forward the wearing of seal caps to an unprecedented extent. Long seal garments were never more in demand by those who can afford them and trimmed with sable or otter, follow the fancy for combination. Fitted or half fitted garments are suited to slight figures and therefore worn chiefly by young people, while for the middle aged or elderly, elegant cloaks showing sleeves commencing at the back seams. For middle aged or elderly ladies, come also seal wraps short at the back and with long ends; jaunty short wraps for young ladies give a change from jackets and for them also are displayed a great variety of capes. According to C. C. Shayne, the leading fur dealer, whose removal up to forty-second street has been a noteworthy event in the retail trade, afford such possibilities of coquetry, warmth and graceful finish to a costume, that they seem more popular than ever, being three yards long and exclusively of fluffy fur, either dark or light and the same can be said of trimmings, in which medium shades have given way to extremes. Combinations extend even to muffs which sometimes now are made in two kinds of fur and in costume, the introduction of fur in new ways, is very noticeable though not novel. In the purchase of furs, it is always best to deal with merchants exclusively devoted to that branch of trade. Their judgment as experts, must be sound, and it may be added that no fur house of standing can afford deception of customers. Like Samson, they would bring ruin on their own heads and soon be distanced by their rivals.

NOTES AND ANSWERS.

Leather work trimmings are stylish in applique patterns and embroidery of metal or jet beads. White kid is worked in silk and with addition of pearl, silver or gilt beads, is refined and showy.

Striking hats or bonnets are of black felt or velvet trimmed with ribbon in flaring shades of green, red or orange. Immense Gainsborough or Directoire shapes in felt, are lavishly adorned with upright loops of ribbon on the crown and clustering feathers.

"Corra." Vandike and Eifel Tour points are leading styles in trimmings and are made in silk embroideries, guip or fine jet passementerie. In black, they are very fashionable on colors or may show a combination of new shades with black as a foundation. Open work embroideries in guipure patterns are also new and would be suitable for a cloak as indeed would be any of the above mentioned garments.

WHIMS OF THE SOCIETY ACTRES.

"A young woman of wealth and social position was about to make her debut under my management," said a well known theatrical manager. "The play was bought and the company engaged. One day she ran into my office in a great state of agitation."

"Oh, Mr. Blank," she cried, tugging at her little valise, from which she drew out a tiny ribbon, "here's the color of the dress I am to wear."

"I was dumfounded for a moment. 'Well, Miss H—,' I said, 'I don't quite understand.'"

"Oh, yes," she ran on, "I shall have a dress made of that material and cut de-collete."

"But do you know what the other ladies are going to wear?" I asked her.

"No, I don't."

"Do you know what the colors of the scenery are, and that it is customary to obtain information about these matters before deciding on a dress? Now, I think a plush gown would be just."

"She roused in an instant. 'I shouldn't wear plush! No, I'll never put a bit of it on my body. There, now! I'll agree to nothing but silk, sir, and, I'll color, too.'"

"I told her the color would never do (it was a bright yellow), but she insisted that she would wear it."

"Look here, miss," said I, for I was annoyed beyond measure, "do you imagine that I am going to build a whole scene, with costumes and all the rest of it, around that bit of ribbon?"

"It was enough. She left. By-and-by she became a little more docile, and she wore the right dress after all. I only mention this to illustrate that there is something else in stage dressing than the mere selection of showy and expensive dry goods."—Philadelphia Times.

AN INTERESTING GROUP. Probably one railroad ticket never carried a larger party out of Maine than did one sold in Saco Tuesday, and everything was fair and above board. The party consisted of a young woman and her seven children, whose ages ranged from one to eight years. When the family were arranged, with the baby, twins about two years old, and another child on one seat, and the eldest child, another pair of twins and some miscellaneous baggage opposite them, they formed an interesting group. The children were all clean and well behaved.—Leicester Journal.

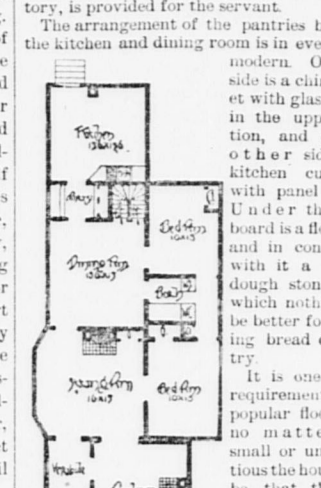

—The income of the Brockton Street Railway above operating expenses for the ending September 30th, was $25,261. A dividend of eight per cent, was declared and the surplus for the year was $8,694.

The Lynn & Boston and the Naumkeag of Salem also declared eight per cent, and the Worcester Consolidated six per cent.

A CONVENIENT HOUSE.

Plans for a Residence in Which the Mistress May "Do Her Own Work."

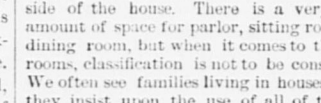

"She does her own work" is an expression frequently used of a lady who does not employ help. A difficulty in planning a one story house is in providing room for a servant. It is not desirable to have her room opening from the sitting room or dining room, nor is it altogether satisfactory to have such a room opening from the kitchen. Furthermore, the expense of placing it in any of these places is a very material consideration. In the plan which is here given this difficulty is met by providing a stairway that leads to the high part of the roof over the dining room. Thus, with very little additional expense, a large, airy room, one which cannot but be in every way satisfactory, is provided for the servant.

must be the same classification of rooms in a small, one-story house that is to be found in the more expensive and elaborate structure. In this case, in a small, one-story house, there is a parlor, sitting room, dining room and kitchen, and as well the bed room. This makes the planning of low cost, one-story houses a very troublesome matter. The classification is on the wrong side of the house. There is a very large amount of space for parlor, sitting room and dining room, but very little for the bedroom, classification is not to be considered. We often see families living in houses where they must use the use of all of the day rooms above mentioned, but are apparently content with two, or at most three, bedrooms.

This suggests a consolidation at night which is uncomfortable to contemplate. In making use of the attic space as a part of the problem of added bedrooms in a low cost house, which has nearly all of the rooms on one floor, these attic rooms are quite comfortable and a very satisfactory way of solving the problem.

Another peculiarity with respect to the planning of one story houses is that people will content themselves with a bedroom much smaller than they will in a two-story house of the same cost. The same accommodations can be provided in a two-story house at a less cost than in a one-story house for reasons which are obvious to any one who will stop to think about it. The roof and foundation of a one story house would be ample for one, two, or more stories high. A two-story house is more imposing, affords better ventilation, and with the conveniences of plumbing, is in every way as convenient as the one story house.

ASH CHAMBER SETS, $15.00.

The above price is rather low but yet we have them at this price. How does it happen? We will tell you the whole story. At a Factory their was 100 sets ready to finish and for some reason to us unknown the factory took fire in one part of it and the 100 sets got some smoke on them, not enough to do harm except in the finish, they were not suitable to finish light. We bought the lot at our own price and as fast as possible we are finishing them in imitation of Walnut; the sets ought to sell for $25.00, but while they last we offer them for $15.00 for 8 Pieces.

Thanksgiving day will soon be here and we trust our friends have much to be thankful for. We know we have, and right here let us say to the people of this City who so kindly enquire how we are getting along, that our trade has been very much larger than we could have expected, in fact our sales have been nearly double the amount owing to a number of reasons.

We find the good name we had during the five years we were in Brockton has followed us to Quincy. For in the past year while we have sold not far from 5,000 Cases, yet up to this time we have never obliged a single person to give up a lot of goods. People in Brockton knew we were Honest and would not take advantage of them. Then again we find it gives satisfaction to the people who visit our store to find such a big stock, larger than many of the large Boston Stores; and our prices are marked in Plain figures, at which price we sell Weekly Payments and to Cash Customers we make a suitable discount so they can get the full value of their money. But where do our customers come from? Well a good number from this City, but also a large number from the towns within 10 miles. We suppose our teams are quite sure to go to some part of Braintree at least once a day, and we have a good trade in Randolph, Holbrook, all the Weymouths, Hingham, Hyde Park and in fact every town within 10 miles. We were very fortunate in getting so big a store at such a low rent and so well located, for it's location for our trade is the best in the City.

Perhaps you are a stranger to us and have never visited our store, if so we hope you will come soon and see the largest store in this part of the state, and for your information let us state that while we manufacture a large part of the goods that we sell, yet we keep a good stock of Carpets, Ranges, Parlor Stoves, Crockery, Tin and Wooden Ware, in fact about everything needed for Housekeeping, and if you have not the ready cash we will sell to you on part payments.

We keep a big line of spring beds, mattresses, bed quilts, etc.

But perhaps at this season of the year our most important department is our stove department. Our line of parlor stoves is large, and at all prices from $5.00 to $25.00. For ranges we have the Acorn. While there are a great many nice ranges in the market, the Acorn is without doubt the best. We have a number of other kinds, but the Acorn is the best for a large family.

If you don't happen to have the ready cash, then pay us $3.00 cash and $1.00 per week or $4.00 per month. We sell any stove or range that we have this way. We sell any kind of goods for a small sum down and the balance by the month or week. $20.00 worth of goods for $1.00 cash and $1.00 per week or $4.00 per month. Come and see us.

THANKSGIVING DAY 1889.

The above price is rather low but yet we have them at this price. How does it happen? We will tell you the whole story. At a Factory their was 100 sets ready to finish and for some reason to us unknown the factory took fire in one part of it and the 100 sets got some smoke on them, not enough to do harm except in the finish, they were not suitable to finish light. We bought the lot at our own price and as fast as possible we are finishing them in imitation of Walnut; the sets ought to sell for $25.00, but while they last we offer them for $15.00 for 8 Pieces.

Thanksgiving day will soon be here and we trust our friends have much to be thankful for. We know we have, and right here let us say to the people of this City who so kindly enquire how we are getting along, that our trade has been very much larger than we could have expected, in fact our sales have been nearly double the amount owing to a number of reasons.

THE TURKEY'S LAST GOBBLE.

Behold me now.
 A Turkey with a big T.
 Time, 9 o'clock A. M.
 By 5 P. M.
 What will I be?
 A wreck;
 A total wreck;
 A tragedy on animated organisms;
 A weird, bewildering
 Entanglement of bones
 And gravity;
 A hollow mockery;
 With every word of stuffing
 Eternally knocked out of it;
 A ghost, Clothed in the Bony relics of its living entity!
 A ruined destiny
 Carved out
 To stand a monument
 To appetite!
 A gobbler with his gobble Gone to those Who gobbled in another key!
 A—
 But hold.
 This is Thanksgiving day!
 Taste!

THE LOST FOUND.

A THANKSGIVING STORY, BY ANNIE L. WILLIS.

(Copyright, 1889, by American Press Association.)

ing, two days before Thanksgiving, for which great occasion he was going to town, twenty miles away, to "do some trading."

He told the children, Bob and Elsie, that he would come back with lots of things—peanuts and raisins, and perhaps some oranges, besides other eatables necessary for the Thanksgiving feast.

How the little ones shouted at the mention of oranges, for you must know that such dainties seldom fell to their share. Hard work, early and late, on the little farm, only sufficed to keep the family plainly clothed and fed, and they had few luxuries.

As the sleigh joggled along the man fell to thinking of the dear ones who would watch for his return on the morrow.

"I'll give 'em a good Thanksgiving 't I can," he thought. "There ain't no fault by that deserves it more. Wish I could sell everything I've got with me. Wouldn't I make their eyes open, though! Mebbe I could buy 'em some figs. The children's never seen any. An' I'd get Mirandy an egg beater. She ain't never had none."

The miles to town grew less as the horse went on, and the influence of the brilliant winter day made Mr. Wilkins happy, not so much because he was susceptible to nature's beauty, but because he thought, "If this here weather'll only hold out, I'll be back early to-morrow."

Mrs. Wilkins spent the day in getting ready for the feast, with such material as she had on hand. She killed the biggest and plumpest chicken in the yard. Bob looked on delightedly at the operation. Tender hearted Elsie ran into the house and put her fingers in her ears, so that she "could not hear the poor chicken cry," she said. Then there was rye bread to make, and a kind of "plain sweet cake," the best they ever had. There were also dried apples and pumpkin pies to bake, the house to set in order, the chickens to feed. Nine-year-old Bob and 6-year-old Elsie were eager to "help mother," and while the former fed old Red Top, the rooster, and his family, the little girl trotted around in her coarse brown cloak and blue hood sweeping the doorstep and picking up sticks in the yard for the fire, she said.

So the day wore on, and when the early winter evening closed in upon them, they had their simple supper of bread, milk and meat, and soon the little ones were asleep.

As Mrs. Wilkins sat sewing, she heard the wind rising, and went to the window to look out. The moon was partly covered by threatening clouds. While she watched they obscured the silver light completely.

"It looks mighty threatenin'," she said to herself. "I should feel real bad if I couldn't get back for

Coughing

IS Nature's effort to expel foreign substances from the bronchial passages. Frequently, this causes inflammation and the need of an anodyne. No other expectorant or anodyne is equal to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It assists Nature in ejecting the mucus, allays irritation, induces repose, and is the most popular of all cough cures.

"Of the many preparations before the public for the cure of coughs, colds, bronchitis and kindred diseases, there is none within the range of my experience so reliable as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. For years I was subject to colds, followed by terrible coughs. About four years ago, when so afflicted, I was advised to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and to lay all other remedies aside. I did so, and within a week was well of my cold and cough. Since then I have always kept this preparation in the house, and feel comparatively secure."

—Mrs. L. L. Brown, Denmark, Miss.

"A few years ago I took a severe cold which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continual use of the Pectoral, a permanent cure was effected. I am now well, and feel comparatively secure."

Particular attention paid to Land Surveying, laying out private grounds, and the general improvement of Real Estate.

In a very short time this land was transformed into beautiful additions to the city; streets were graded, broad avenues laid out, a beautiful pleasure park dedicated, and the wilderness gave place to beautiful lawns, surrounding lovely homes, and the desert blossomed as the rose. Everything that can be done by the lavish use of unlimited means to beautify and adorn these lovely grounds, to make them look upon, is being done, and one long, where but a short time since nature had full sway, the ruthless hand of man had been swept the crown from her brow and dotted the hills and the valleys with his handiwork. Boston Theatres.

The Emma Juch Opera Company has met with great success the past week.

The scenery, and costumes are very elaborate and historically correct as to place and period, making the opera much more interesting.

This Saturday afternoon matinee, Faust, as Marguerite and in the evening the ever popular opera II Trovatore. That the Boston people appreciate this brief opera season is shown by the crowded houses.

Hollis Street.

Closing performance of this Saturday afternoon and evening of the "Sennacherib" which has made a most decided hit, and drawn crowded houses. Mr. and Mrs. Kendall will appear Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Wednesday matinee in, "A Scrap of Paper," and Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday matinee in, "The Iron Master." These English artists are very popular and received an enthusiastic welcome in New York, but Boston will, we predict, give them a still more cordial greeting for they know how to appreciate a good thing.

Globe.

Third week of "The Oolah" and still a rush to see this taking opera. It is even more laughable and popular than "Ernie" and it is plain to see that Francis Wilson and his company are favorites in Boston. Performers this afternoon and in the evening.

Museum.

"Hands Across the Sea" is still meeting with great success, and is in its fourth month. It is the most popular and successful play that has been at the Museum for some time. All should see it before it is too late, as already it has had a long run.

No kicking in the laundry when Brussels soap is used.

Anecdotes.

Wife: "Mercy! these bundles are awfully heavy. Can't you carry them?"

Husband: "Not now, all these people around know me."

Wife: Ah! then they will not wonder that I am carrying them."

Little Arthur was chopping with a hatchet one day and cut his finger.

"The bad old hatchet, I'll tell it."

"No, don't dear; you can't chop with it if you do."

"I can chop just the same," (making the motion with his arm) "but I won't leave any tracks."

Fussy old maid, entering base ball grounds: "Why, what did they all begin to yell 'four' for when I came in?"

Do they mean me?"

Police gate-keeper: "Oh, no, mum. You ain't no chicker."

Colored lad: "Gentleman to see ya, mum."

Lady of the house (at breakfast): "Very well, John; show him into the parlor."

John: "Oh, but it's the gentleman come to sweep the chimney."

Lady (much nettled): "Then show him up the chimney."

Try Brussels soap, and you will always use it.

SATURDAY, DEC. 7, 1889.

Why They Twinkle.

When Eve had led her lord astray, And Cain had killed his brother, The stars and flowers, the poets say, Agreed with one another.

To cheat the cunning temper's art, And teach the wicked his duty, By keeping on the razor's edge, Their eyes of light and beauty.

A million sleepless lids, they say, Will be at least a warning;

And so the flowers would watch by day, And stars from eve to eve morning.

On hill and prairie, field and lawn, The dewy eyes are upturning.

The flowers still watch from reddening dawn Till western stars are burning.

Alas! each hour of daylight tells A tale of shame so soothing.

That some turn white as sea bleached shells, And some are always blushing.

But when the patient stars look down On all their light discover,

The traitor's smiles, the murderer's frown, The tips of dying lovers.

They try to shut their saddening eyes, And in the vain endeavor

We see them twinkling in the skies, And so they wink forever.

DEWEY WENDALL HOLMES.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

Denison, Texas, No. 7.

This wide-awake city of about 17,000 population, has an excellent public school system for a new place. Texas has a magnificent public school fund, which is appropriated annually for every child in the State of scholastic age; the average appropriation being about $5 each; of this amount Denison receives about $8,000; which, together with that appropriated by the city, gives good public schools. Her school properties consist of five two-story brick buildings for white children, and two brick buildings for colored children. The average daily attendance is about 1,300. The value of these properties will approximate $200,000 at a conservative estimate. The excellence of these public schools has always been the proudest boast of this people.

Religious denominations are well represented here, the majority of the sects owning their own church edifices, with costly, home-like pastorates adjoining.

Among the industries which add very materially to the prosperity of the city, are planing mills, foundries, an ice factory, cotton gins, cotton compresses, electric-light works, gas works, cannery factory, steam laundries, soap works, machine shops and others of minor importance. That institution which is the head and front of the present unparalled growth of the city, and which has proclaimed its advantages and the splendid opportunities which are offered here for the investment of capital and brains, is the Denison Land and Investment Co., of which Mr. W. P. Rice, son of W. W. Rice of Wallston, is one of the principal managers. Its stockholders comprise some of the shrewdest and most successful business men of New England. That which has been accomplished by the company since its formation, less than six months ago, is simply marvelous, and the investment of their capital and the energy that has been displayed in pushing the different enterprises in which they have interested themselves, is a wonder to the city. In a very short time this land was transformed into beautiful additions to the city; streets were graded, broad avenues laid out, a beautiful pleasure park dedicated, and the wilderness gave place to beautiful lawns, surrounding lovely homes, and the desert blossomed as the rose. Everything that can be done by the lavish use of unlimited means to beautify and adorn these lovely grounds, to make them look upon, is being done, and one long, where but a short time since nature had full sway, the ruthless hand of man had been swept the crown from her brow and dotted the hills and the valleys with his handiwork. Boston Theatres.

The Emma Juch Opera Company has met with great success the past week.

The scenery, and costumes are very elaborate and historically correct as to place and period, making the opera much more interesting.

This Saturday afternoon matinee, Faust, as Marguerite and in the evening the ever popular opera II Trovatore. That the Boston people appreciate this brief opera season is shown by the crowded houses.

Hollis Street.

Closing performance of this Saturday afternoon and evening of the "Sennacherib" which has made a most decided hit, and drawn crowded houses. Mr. and Mrs. Kendall will appear Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Wednesday matinee in, "A Scrap of Paper," and Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday matinee in, "The Iron Master." These English artists are very popular and received an enthusiastic welcome in New York, but Boston will, we predict, give them a still more cordial greeting for they know how to appreciate a good thing.

Globe.

Third week of "The Oolah" and still a rush to see this taking opera. It is even more laughable and popular than "Ernie" and it is plain to see that Francis Wilson and his company are favorites in Boston. Performers this afternoon and in the evening.

Museum.

"Hands Across the Sea" is still meeting with great success, and is in its fourth month. It is the most popular and successful play that has been at the Museum for some time. All should see it before it is too late, as already it has had a long run.

Anecdotes.

Wife: "Mercy! these bundles are awfully heavy. Can't you carry them?"

Husband: "Not now, all these people around know me."

Wife: Ah! then they will not wonder that I am carrying them."

Little Arthur was chopping with a hatchet one day and cut his finger.

"The bad old hatchet, I'll tell it."

"No, don't dear; you can't chop with it if you do."

"I can chop just the same," (making the motion with his arm) "but I won't leave any tracks."

Fussy old maid, entering base ball grounds: "Why, what did they all begin to yell 'four' for when I came in?"

Do they mean me?"

Police gate-keeper: "Oh, no, mum. You ain't no chicker."

Colored lad: "Gentleman to see ya, mum."

Lady of the house (at breakfast): "Very well, John; show him into the parlor."

John: "Oh, but it's the gentleman come to sweep the chimney."

Lady (much nettled): "Then show him up the chimney."

Try Brussels soap, and you will always use it.

For the Patriot.

An Excursion to Dixie Land.

It is usual to know for northern folk to go South in the winter. This is a nice thing to do if we dislike the crisp cold weather of New England and New York, and do not wish to get into a warmer spot than we find North in its gentle genial summer. But it is a good idea to visit the South in the summer and winter, too, then we get personally acquainted with the two sides of its nature, the warm side and the cool side. This is the case with almost every person you know as it is with almost every country. He is sometimes cordial and sometimes he is quite ready to give the cold shoulder, and give for the cold side. But we will be quite contented if we have a little more sunshine than snow. As upon the whole I think we prefer flowers to frost. The man with the bald head when he was pitted for his misfortune replied that he was not going to complain if his head was bald on the outside as long as it was not bald on the inside.

I broke the record taking a quick excursion down South visiting Georgia and Alabama in August and taking a look at some places and people into October. I went in the fine steamer Nacoochee. This Indian name means Evening Star. These steamers of the Savannah Line are large, handsomely furnished, and fitted up for the comfort of passengers. The service is all that could be wished for, and the fare is equal to that of a first class hotel in Boston or New York. Capt. Kempton is as agreeable a gentleman as is to be met, and a commander of the Nacoochee.

I naturally inferred he was a Yankee and found that he was one of the nobility of New England, having wisely chosen my own splendid State of Maine to be born in. We had a quick trip of only fifty hours from New York to Savannah. The sea was as smooth as a pond in a parlor for gold fish. When a porpoise peeped above the water we could see his kind face plainly. He looks so jolly and so contented, as if he were always taking a bath.

Savannah is the largest city in Georgia, the Empire State of the South. It contains 75,000 inhabitants and is a very active port for foreign trade in the line of cotton. The cotton crop was beautiful this season and the colored fellows have plenty of work, pressing it, hauling it and loading it on the ships. The steamer I returned in brought 7000 bales of cotton to this port. I saw a lot of fine cotton of a dozen verses, but every one just alike, while they are at work. I noticed, and was sorry for it, that they spent Negro with two goods when they were having each other out with their empty ships.

Savannah is noted for its pretty parks and squares. It has twenty-five and several have statues of distinguished men. I was glad to find a small number of prisoners in jail—only fifty at a city of this size. How many of the colored persuasion do you think there are in the group? Just two more than half a hundred.

The negroes here take care not to get into the white man's way, and are not so wily in a ludicrous fashion which is not hurtful to the eye. They are rather good looking without their faces. They talk in a shade-shade lingo-political style. I was glad to find a small number of prisoners in jail—only fifty at a city of this size. How many of the colored persuasion do you think there are in the group? Just two more than half

The First Cloud.

They stood at the altar one short year ago;
He vowed from the troubles of life to defend her.

To-night, in the gloom, they are sitting apart—
Oh! has all her wifely devotion been wasted—
She moans there in silence, a pain at her heart.

The lamps are unlighted, his supper
untasted.
Their sky, erst all cloudless, is now overcast.
For joy there is sorrow, for gladness dejection.

The serpent has entered their Eden at last,
And left its dark trail on the flowers of affection.

Oh, well may there be in her bosom a pain,
A grief that she vainly endeavors to smother—
"Oh," said Aldrich, guiltily, "I suppose To-night he has told her, in language quite plain,
She can't cook his meals half as well as his mother!"

HOW THE PLAN WORKED.

"Your white roses are just coming into bud, Lally," said Aldrich Cone, as he came in from the garden. "Blossom Hedge is at its prettiest now."

The coffee exhaled a fragrant odor, the fresh-baked biscuits were of the most delicate brown, and the chickens broiled to a turn, but Mrs. Cone's face wore a most tragic expression, as she sat with an open letter in her hand.

"Aldrich," said she, hysterically, "what am I to do? Here's your Aunt Edith coming here next week, with her six children and the nurse! They've had the measles, it seems, and the doctor has prescribed strict quarantine, so they've decided to inflict a four weeks' visitation upon me!"

"Oh," said Aldrich, guiltily, "I forgot to tell you. Haldee Clair wants to come here this Summer. She requires perfect quiet to finish her new novel, and says she retains such a delightful impression of Blossom Hedge from her last Summer's visit."

"Oh, does she, indeed?" said Mrs.
Cone, dabbling the cream and sugar re-lessly into the sea-green china cups. "And we must remember that your cousin Edith has kindly volunteered to send Andromeda here for the Summer, so that she may forget that love affair of hers with Jack Jocelyn!"

"I'm afraid we haven't room for 'em all," said Mrs. Cone, reflectively.

"Oh, yes, you have," said Lally, with tears and laughter struggling in her voice.
"They'll sleep on the hall hat rack, on the garret floor or the cellar shelves, sooner than forego the opportunity of getting good country food for nothing! And I shall do as I did last year—get along without a new Winter suit, and do my own Winter housework, because the housekeeping bills were so heavy during the Summer. All our relations are very particular, you know, about their eating and drinking, and we had to get new hair mattresses for the Johnson-Smythes, and recarpet Haldee's room because she 'perfectly abhorred' the old pattern."

"It's outrageous!" said Cone, carving the chickens. "But I don't know how we are to help ourselves without being dreadfully rude."

"Tell them plainly that they cannot come."

"Our relations, Lally?" remonstrated Cone.

"It's an imposition," said Lally.
"It's only for a little while, my love.
Let 'em come."

"It will be for all Summer, Aldrich."
"No it won't. I'll see to that."

"What do you mean?"

"I've got a plan in my head, my love."
"A plan?"

"Yes. You'll see. Only don't ask any questions."

"But, Aldrich," pleaded the young housekeeper, with every hospitable impulse rising up in her heart, "you mustn't treat
'em rudely."

"I'll be as pleasant as Punch to 'em, my love, so if I'm not."

"Aldrich, what are you going to do?"

"Don't I tell you, Lally, that it's a profound secret?"

"But you'll tell me?"

"I'll tell nobody."

And to this platform Mr. Cone steadfastly adhered, in spite of Lally's protestations and entreaties.

The authors arrived, with several huge trunks, a typewriter and a hammock.

Miss Andromeda Falkland came by the next train, "like Nibs, all tears," and Mrs.
Edith, her nurse and her six noisy, troublesome young convalescents brought up the rear.

"Ten people!" said Mrs. Cone to that trustworthy and reliable confidant, herself.

"Oh, dear! oh, dear! I might as well have taken a situation for general housework in a Summer boarding-house."

"I don't see," said Mrs. Pepper, the minister's wife, "what that young Cone is thinking of, to allow his wife to be so overridden with relations. The weather is very hot, and she is far from strong. And I am told they sleep themselves on a sofa bedstead in the parlor, to make room for that swarm of parasites."

"My dear," said the good parson, "are you not expressing yourself rather strongly?"

"I'm only speaking the truth," said
Mrs. Pepper.

But it soon transpired that Mrs. Cone's visitors, like Barnum's happy family, could not agree.

Miss Haldee Clair could not write without the accompaniment of perfect silence.
The little Ediths could not divert themselves without the hoots and shrieks peculiar to their tender years, and Miss Cone and Mrs. Edith took exception to the mournful banjo notes on which Andromeda Falkland was wont of an evening to bewail her blighted love.

"They are quarreling like cats and dogs," sighed Lally to her husband.

"Let 'em quarrel," said Aldrich.

"What larks, ma!" said Mrs. Edith Ed-ingham one afternoon, as she returned from a successful raid upon the hens' nests in the barn. We've got to take our hammocks and croquet sets out of the Maple lot."

"What for?" petulantly inquired his mother.

"Cousin Aldrich has sold it,"
"Sold it? How very inconsiderate of him!" said Mrs. Edith, "Sold it to whom?"

"To the cemetery people."

"What?"

"The cemetery people," enunciated Master Erskine. "The railroad's a-going right through the old graveyard, and they've got to have a new place. I heard Cousin Aldrich tell the carpenter to bring that load of fence posts right off, and I heard him say that it didn't matter so much, because there had already been two or three interments there."

"Interments?" gasped Mrs. Edith, "under our very windows? Goodness, gracious me! I never heard of such a thing!"

"If ye please, ma'am," said Della, the nurse, "that accounts for it."

"Accounts for what?"

"The ghost, mum, all in white!" uttered Della, with clattering teeth.

"I don't know what you're talking about," said Mrs. Edith, "but the church clock struck twelve; and I see it the night before. An' I don't wonder, ma'am, the poor dead bodies bein' dug up and scattered around this way. And if you please ma'am, you'll suit yourself at once, for not another week will Della O'Tourke live next door to a churchyard!"

"Ma, ma," whispered Florence Ed-ingham, who had eagerly devoured every word of the discussion, "I'm afraid of ghosts. Della says ghosts come after little girls that they don't love."

"Will you hush?" said Mrs. Edith, "Aldrich, clapping her hands in despair. "Aldrich, what is this? Have you sold the Maple lot?"

"Sold it? Why shouldn't I?" said Mr.
Cone, who just then came in with a string of speckled brook trout. "They offered me a capital price, and I'm not a rich man."

"But to a cemetery!"

"I don't know a quieter neighbor than a cemetery," said Aldrich.

"And I'm told," said Mrs. Edith, "that some interments have already taken place!"

"I didn't suppose you'd mind it, Aunt Edith," said the young host.

"Mind it! Why, it's a semi-barbarous proceeding!" cried the lady. "Do we live in a civilized country, or do we not?"

"Ma," screamed Edith, Edingham, the second son, jerking at the maternal skirts, "here's a load of lumber at the barn, a real big load. Do you suppose that's to make the coffins out of?"

"Just then Miss Clara stalked, a la Lady Macbeth, upon the scene.

"I attach no importance to vulgar superstitions," said she, glancing at Mrs. Ed-ingham, with whom she was no longer on speaking terms. "Of the dead I entertain no fear. But the living are quite a different thing. And I certainly saw a—man, Cousin Aldrich, prowling about these premises last night, with a dark lantern."

"The ghost!" squeaked Della. "I saw him, too! I did, with these eyes, the blessed saints be true me and all harm!
Oh! oh! oh!"

"Peace, foolish woman!" said Haldee.
"This was no shade! It was a burly thief, intent no doubt on mischief. I saw him try to open the back parlor shutter, and then Neighbor Foxley's wagon drove by, and he disappeared as if by magic. And I want you to understand, Lally, to Mrs.
Cone, that this sort of thing. My profession requires that I should be surrounded by peaceful calm. I leave her tomorrow."

"An' I'll go wid ye," said Della. "I can't sleep nights in a place where burglars is climbin' up the trellis work, and poor ghosts come stalkin' around when the church clock strikes midnight, and a whole wagon load more comin'!"

"Oh, house!
the like of it never was heard before!"

"Ma, ma! can't we go, too? We're afraid to stay at Blossom Hedge any longer!" pleaded the little Ediths in chorus.

And so there was a general exodus.
"Aldrich is this true?" said Mrs.
Cone, when the last express load of trunks had disappeared around the curve of the road.

"Is what true? You're not afraid of ghosts, are you, Lally?"

"No; but—"

"Don't fret, my dear," said Cone, com-posedly. "The cemetery has purchased a lot, but it happens to be Maple Hill, four miles to the east of us. I'm not to blame, am I, for Erskine Edingham's blunder?"

"But the load of lumber?"

"I've sold the place to Dr. Bassett, and he's going to build a gem of a Queen Anne cottage. I can't imagine any pleasanter neighbors than the Bassetts will be; can you?"

"I-yes," said bewildered Lally; "but the interments that had already taken place there? You said yourself—"

"My dearest girl, you not remember that we buried Minnie, your pet spaniel under the sweet-brier bush there? and the two canaries last Fall?"

"Oh, Aldrich, aren't you ashamed of yourself?"

"Who—? Not in the least."

"But the ghosts, Aldrich? The burglars?"

"Here comes Andromeda," said Mr.
Cone, with a sudden assumption of more than judicial gravity. "Come here you false damsel, and own up at once what I've already seen sharp enough to discover for myself."

"Oh, Cousin Aldrich," stammered poor Andromeda, blushing celestial red, and trying vainly to hide her face behind the blue-ribboned banjo in her hand.

"I am neither Della O'Tourke, nor yet Edith Edingham, nor yet Haldee Clair," merely went on Aldrich. "And I shrewdly suspect that the ghost was Jack Jocelyn in white tennis suit, hammering the green gold beneath his sweetheart's windows, and the burglar no other than Jack Jocelyn in black, climbing up the trellis after a letter which he knew well where to find."

Andromeda blushed redder than ever.
"Now, I'll have no more of this," said Aldrich, with mock sternness. "Confess, young woman, at once, that you and your love affair are at the bottom of all this mystification. Jack Jocelyn has owned up."

"Oh, Aldrich!" sobbed Andromeda.
"And will you, too, turn against me?"

"Not a bit of it," said Aldrich, "I cheerfully. 'Don't fret, little one, Jack has told me that he has been appointed to a thousand-dollar berth in the general postoffice, and I've written to your mother that things are all right. He's a jolly good fellow, and it isn't necessary for him to play ghost out in the cold any longer.'"

Andromeda threw herself, weeping with some sobs were unkind enough to say that it was undecipherable because it did not exist—but there she lay, year after year, without moving from her bed. It was a nice feather bed which her mother had handed down to her, and which she prized very highly.

"Everybody pitied the deacon. He hired what assistance he could afford, but had to do a large share of the housework himself, and three times every day carry a good square meal to his spouse, whose appetite was remarkably reliable.

"One day the house took fire while the deacon was away. Did the deacon's wife burn up? No. The instinct of self-preservation was stronger than her infirmity. So was the instinct of feather-bed preservation, she got up and carried her bed to the other side of the road. Fortunately the fire was soon extinguished, and she took her bed back to the house and laid herself on it again.

"About 6:30 o'clock that evening she asked the deacon why he had not brought her supper to her as usual.

"Sarah," said he in a tone that smacked mildly and sadly of self-assertion, "if you ever get anything more to eat you'll have to come out in the kitchen after it!"

"And as Sarah had not yet been roasted, neither did she starve."—Levinson Journal.

Electric Lighting.

It is not yet ten years since the first electric light was put into daily use in New York City. But the figures which represent the progress of electric lighting in the last ten years almost stagger belief.

There are said to be 30,000,000 incandescent lamps now in use in the United States. Electricians estimate the cost of these, in dynamo, wires, franchises and other expenses connected with their use, at $20 per each incandescent lamp and $200 for each arc light, making a total investment of capital in this industry of at least $100,000,000. This refers only to electric lights, to which might be appropriately added many millions more as represented in various plants where electricity is used for power to drive machinery or run railway cars.

Electric lights in the United States are practically controlled by four large companies—the Thompson-Houston representing a system of arc lights and incandescent lamps with "alternating currents"; the Brush Light Company and the Edison.
These, with their patents and interests which they control, represent nearly the whole of an industry which is only in its infancy, and yet is able to show an aggregate invested capital of something like $250,000,000, when buildings, dynamo and all kinds of manufacturing machinery are taken into account.—Milford Journal.

Catarrh

It is a blood disease. Until the poison is expelled from the system, there can be no cure for this loathsome and dangerous malady. Therefore, the only effective treatment is a thorough course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla—the best of all blood purifiers. The sooner you begin the better; delay is dangerous.

"I was troubled with catarrh for over two years. I tried various remedies, and was treated by a number of physicians, but received no benefit until I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. A few bottles of this medicine cured me of this troublesome complaint, and completely restored my health."—Jesse M. Rogers, Holman's Mills, N. C.

"When Ayer's Sarsaparilla was recommended to me for catarrh, I was inclined to doubt its efficacy. Having tried so many remedies, with little benefit, I had no faith that anything would cure me. I became convinced from the loss of appetite and impaired digestion. I had nearly lost the sense of smell, and my system was badly deranged. I was about discouraged, when a friend urged me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and referred me to persons whom it had cured of this troublesome disease through the blood."—Charles H. with the performance.

This afternoon Emma Juch will appear as Agnes in "Der Freischütz" and in the evening the company will close their engagement with "Farwell." Emma Juch is very popular with the musical people,

having a pure voice and good enunciation,

drawing full houses during her two weeks'

stay in Boston. Next Monday the fun begins for Hoyt's last and greatest creation, "A Midnight Hell" will be the drawing card.

Museum.

This afternoon and evening closes the engagement of Francis Wilson and company in "Oleah." The house has been crowded at every performance and it is with regret that the popular opera company is to leave Boston for the season.

Next Monday Cleveland's Magnificent Minstrels, headed by $100 a day Billy Emerson, will be on the boards.

Anecdotes.

It is of no use to put nonsense into children's books thinking the little folks will like it just as well as if it were sense.

A little school boy was reading his lesson in school the other day where a picture headed the page; followed by the following legend: "Is this a ship? Yes, it is a ship." Having got so far the little fellow stopped, looked sharply at the picture, and in a tone of disgust, exclaimed:

"Taint a ship, it's a brig," which it was.

"I never speak to my inferiors," said

Reginald de Brookhugh, laughingly.

"No," replied Smith, "I don't believe you ever do. Did you never say that?"

Bobby Henpeck—"Papa, what is a lacheur?"

Papa Henpeck—"A lacheur, my son, is a man to be envied, but please don't tell your mother that I said so.—Exchange.

Wife—"Henry, I fear you have to look out for another house."

Husband—"Why, I thought you were well pleased when I secured this one."

Wife—"So I was, and it still suits me

just as well."

Husband—"Why, then, this notion of changing?"

Wife—"Well, the cook and chambermaid

both object to the present one, and I have been called in to see a man with the smallpox, and when I tell you he looks like I'll come back and I see you."

A blind man was recently seen on the cars from Boston to Concord, accompanied by a small boy. They carried the usual charitable sign, "I am blind will you assist

How Many? How Often? How Little?

How many dear hearts are breaking.

Through a smile is bravely won.

How often we are discouraged.

Over clouds that need not last.

While the sun of the Present is hidden

By failures and griefs of the Past.

How often dear hearts are hungering

For words that never are told;

How little we prize our darlings

Till they are gone and cold.

How often we let the moments

Unladen with good pass by,

And put off the Spring-time sowing

Till the Harvest-time draws nigh.

VICINITY NEWS.

A Campello fellow and his best girl

made a sensation at West Bridgewater,

a few days ago. When seen the young man was seated in the buggy, holding the reins and whipping the horse, while the girl was perched on the animal's lap, clothes-pin and laughing gaily.

A meeting of architects, builders and business men was held recently in Boston to consider needed changes in the building

laws suggested by the recent fire.

It is estimated that 12,500 cases of shoes, valued at $80,000, were burned in the Lynn fire.

Holbrook is to have an electric railroad to extend to Brockton. It will be built next spring, if present plans are carried out.

When telephoning from Middleboro to Carver about seven miles it is necessary to talk over sixty miles of wire, the line from the former town to Tremont having been discontinued and the circuit now being with Tremont, New Bedford, Wareham and Taunton.

It is estimated that 40 out of every 50 brands of soap are adulterated. Not so with the famous Brussels soap.

WANTED, MECHANIC. For eleven years a

Biddford, Me., man has been at work with his jackknives making a museum of wood curiosities. He has done nothing else,

although his jackknives have brought him

no money except the small proceeds of two exhibitions. He has made animals, tools, a violin case composed of wood,

pieces of wood of the different kinds, a yoke of oxen and a cart put together in a glass jar with a small neck. Many of his carvings are ornamental and others would find ready sale as toys, but he will not set a price upon any part with any article, and his collection is consequently increasing all the time.—Leicester Journal.

There is a lady in Milwaukee who is the mother of nine children. Not one of them was named until she was twelve years old. They were simply called by their nicknames and their numbers, "one,"

"two," etc. When they were twelve years old each one chose his own name and was baptized.

Boston Theatres.

Hollic Street.

The coming of the Kendals has caused a flutter among the theatre goers this week and the Hollic Street has had a rush. This afternoon and evening Mr. and Mrs. Kendal will appear in "The Iron Master" and next week in "Impulse" and "The Weaker Sex." Great disappointment is expressed because their stay in Boston is so short. They have been received with enthusiasm at the theatre and made much of, socially.

THE LAST PERFORMANCE.
Brinful of faces was the hall,
The orchestra played with lightning, and the audience was all
And passed away into the night.
We held them once another way,
My master, in your merry mood—
The people praised us—did we not
The music of your solitude.
And as your strains reached there,
I knew whose shadowy form stood by.
The people praised us—did we not
We were too lonely, you and I
Small joy you had of your renown,
My master, or your gift divine!
I saw your face flash through the gloom,
You, broken hearted, even as I!
—May Kendall in Scott's Overture.
THE LIFTED CLOUD.
"Rosa, darling, are you quite happy?
If I ever cause you a moment's unhappiness may I wear horns forever, like your fiendish prompter. Father and mother dote upon you; won't you try to love them, pet?"
This spoke a young and handsome husband to his beautiful bride during their honeymoon, while on a visit to his parents.
The youthful Rosa folded her hands meekly over her bosom and answered solemnly:
"Wilbur, thy people shall be my people."
So far good, but soon misunderstandings and heartaches, arising from conflicting tastes and habits, overshadowed their little romance.
The happy couple became tired of visiting and, disgusted with boarding, then they went to housekeeping, and,
having ample means, furnished their home in elegant style. Rosa was satisfied, but thought that one more picture was needed to fill a certain vacancy on the parlor wall, and whenever she expressed a particular wish for anything Wilbur, lover like, was quick to gratify it. One day she was surprised and delighted to find that he had placed one there. She was a woman of cultivated tastes, and was really shocked upon examining it more closely.
It was a representation of the death of Washington—the morning family with different expressions of grief upon their countenances were grouped around the dying hero; a negro, black as night, peeped from behind the drapery of the bed, while above hovered the goddess of liberty with a sorrowful, half-averted face. It was painted in glowing colors in most execrable taste.
Rosa turned away in dismay, and met the smiling eyes of her husband, who had entered unperceived.
"What do you think of it, dear?" he pleasantly inquired.
"It is the most horrible daub I ever saw," she replied, scornfully.
"Daub, Rosa? The painting is somewhat faulty, I admit, but the design is fine, is it not? O how the family will mourn the loss of her champion!"
"Indeed," said his wife, mischievously,
"I can't decide whether the goddess is weeping over the dead general or over the intensely black man, who appears to be wiping his nose upon the curtains.
I suppose this is one of your jokes, Wilbur, but pray remove this unsightly blot immediately, lest some inopportune visitor happen in and shame us."
"No, Rosa! I intend it shall remain," he replied emphatically; "it is a very impressive picture."
"Very," said she, sarcastically, "nothing can be more impressive than a death scene—it is especially suggestive for the walls of a parlor."
"You are a fool," he exclaimed, with rising anger.
"Then I'm not a suitable wife for a gentleman of distinction, and I will politeness," she retorted with bitterness.
Then she rushed to her own room, there herself upon a chair, flung her arms half across the table and burst into a storm of hysterical sobs.
All their little vanities rose to her mind; how very singular that Wilbur should admire this odious picture; she had often heard his judicious comments upon various works of art; never before had she known him to be so deficient in judgment. Surely there must be some hidden motive for such conduct.
What could it be? The longer she entertained this idea the more convinced she became that there was a mystery attached to it, and a feeling of jealousy was aroused in her heart.
While indulging in this luxury of good cry a lady friend called and she was obliged to calm herself sufficiently to receive her.
"Dear Mrs. Plant," she exclaimed, pittously, "I am very unhappy; Wilbur has called me a fool—and I—I thought that the first year of married life was always the happiest."
"Not always, dear Rosa; it takes years to learn the ins and outs of each others' character, as well as to assimilate in habits and tastes, but do be discomforted; love has as many lives as the proverbial cat."
"You can joke, Mrs. Plant, but I feel my heart is breaking."
"Well, dear, one of the most insupportable things that can afflict the sensitive heart, disenchanteing forever the bright illusions of life, is the first doubt of the idol of our affections," replied her friend, laughing; "but seriously, Rosa, I am a veteran and have passed through many a slight skirmish. Come, cheer up; your heart is tender, but not past mending. You must go home with me over the river; I dare say that irate husband of yours has already eaten his word up to it, if he starves his love for a while, he will not starve his stomach." Rosa accompanied Mrs. Plant to her handsome home, leaving word for her husband that she would return the next day. While crossing the ferry her friend narrowly escaped being swept away by her thoughts from that dreadful epithet of "fool," which she said was ringing in her ears continually.
"Rosa," she said pleasantly, "you must not allow trifles to worry you so. Men are fickle creatures at best. Let me tell you a secret; it may be helpful to you."
"I was not my Charlie's first love; you look incredulous, but he himself told me all about it—when in his 20th year he took a fancy to a pretty girl and visited her frequently, finally, however, was attracted and interesting upon each visit.

SOMEWHAT LIKE A SOUTHERN HOME.
Plans and Description of a Very Comfortable Picturesque House.
There is something suggestive of a southern home in this floor plan, although it is built in a northern city. The large main room, which extends the full length of the house,
the arrangement of the rooms on each side,
the broad expanse of porch in front, the wide, low pitched roof, the kitchen extension in the rear, all suggest the southern home.

ELEVATION.
It is not uncommon in such buildings to have the entrance directly in front. There is always a vestibule to direct passage into a large room. The placing of a vestibule in front of or at one side of a large hall changes it into a room.
If there were a door in the front part of the large central room of this house there would necessarily have to be a hat rack or other repository for wraps, umbrellas, etc., which never present themselves agreeably to the eye. Furthermore, in placing them away from the door, there would be a passage across the room to the hat rack, which would be marked at times with dirt and dust brought in from the outside. The vestibule and stair-hall change all this. In this instance the stair-hall is placed at the side, which gives an unobstructed view from the front part of the main room. This stairhall can be covered by a rug, which can be carried out of the house for cleaning.
One of the great objections to hard wood floors in houses which must be cared for at a moderate expense is the large amount of lacquer they require. They are easily soiled, and show the slightest disfigurement, so that it is necessary more than once every day for some time to wipe them up in spots, if not all over.
In houses where expense or energy of service is not important this may be a small matter, but as the general condition must contain plate economy of energy, it is important that this matter be considered. The disposition which leads those of moderate means to follow the example of wealthy neighbors tends to the use of many hard wood floors. A good body Brussels carpet is easily taken care of as compared with a hard wood floor, and the first cost is but little more.
The inside finish of the entire lower floor of this house is of hard wood. Some little variety is used. The main room is quartered oak, the chamber white pine, the library sassaparilla, the stair hall quartered oak and the dining room walnut. The plastering has a gray tint—not the white, glaring color so common. In the dining room, about half way up the wall, on all sides, is a shelf which is about six inches wide. It extends between casings of all doors and windows. On the under side of it are cupboards, to which may be hung an occasional cup, or through which small or other green or decorative material may be hung. The shelf is a very useful feature of the house.
On the second floor are three full height square bedrooms. The larger rooms are in the high part of the roof where the height is sufficient to admit ceiling with light color beams. Not even the upper corners of the rooms are clipped. The height to the small room is derived by placing a dormer the size of the room and side of the house.
To return to the first floor, the main room is divided by a circular form of ornate metal fretwork so that there is a large passage through the center. The hearth is made front through this fretwork to the mantel and seat in the rear is very charming. The mantel itself is of wood. The facing is of enamel. The Venetian glass work shows on the front through the shelf.
The porch is a very elegant feature of this house, presenting, as it does, large unobstructed space for this room outside the house. The main body of the porch, as it will be seen, is to one side of the entrance, thus no one is disturbed by a passer-by from the front steps to the door. The large gable in front of the porch is left open to the shattering line above the rafters. The effect of this is not only agreeable, but it lets more light into the main room than would be the case if the gables were filled with ornamental forms of wood work, slung or other material which obstructs the light to a line with the top of the columns of the other part of the porch.
There is another point about this open gable which can only make itself apparent from experience. That is, there is a feeling pleasantly in contrast with the depressing effect which comes from sitting under the low roof of the ordinary form of porch. One cannot sit under this gable, look up and see a large expanse of sky above him; otherwise, there is little more than the horizon to be seen. A number of people sitting on a porch will naturally move from each seat to the center to get under the opening of the gable without really knowing the reason.

Tommy's Experience.
Mrs. Judge Peterby, of Dallas, Tex., has a gifted son who is very much addicted to reading the newspapers, and adopting or putting into practice any hints or suggestions which he thinks are really valuable.
He is particularly enthusiastic about hints in regard to health.
Just about the time the first green watermelons come into season, Mrs. Peterby on her return home from spending the day with a friend found her son Tommy sick, with two doctors taking it turn about with stomach pumps. She also noticed that her numerous geraniums and pot plants were gone. During one of the pauses in Tommy's indisposition she asked what had become of them.
"I read in the Journal of Health," gasped Tommy, feebly, while one of the doctors was screwing a new nozzle on his stomach pump, "I read that it isn't healthy to have plants in a sleeping room, so I sold 'em."
"What did you do with the money, you little wretch?"
"Bought watermelons," gurgled Tommy, as the doctor inserted the nozzle and began to dredge for more alluvial deposits.
Mrs. Peterby has spent some time, while Tommy has been convalescing, in trimming down one end of a hoghead stove, so that she can wield it with both hands on an emergency and Tommy—Texas Siftings.

Paper Fourteen Miles Long.
One of the curiosities at the Pittsburg exposition is a monster roll of paper in the exhibit of Harje Brothers, paper manufacturers and dealers. The paper is ninety-six inches wide, fourteen miles long, and weighs 2,655 pounds. This mammoth bundle of paper is unbroken and without a hole. It is said to be the largest sheet ever turned out of any mill. The roll has been named "The Jumbo," as "when it was being removed from the station to the exposition it required the united efforts of twelve strong men to put it in the wagon."
RECOVERED. Some valuable historical papers were recently recovered by the state.
Secretary of State, Henry B. Peirce, had his attention called to an advertised auction sale of "records and official papers of the First Massachusetts Provincial Congress" and other historical papers. He investigated and found that the papers came originally from the estate of Benjamin Lincoln, of Hingham, and were state property. The present owner supposed them to be private documents in the shape of notes and memoranda, but was soon convinced that they were the original papers. The state took them, and according to a vote of July 29, 1875, they will be "lodged and forever hereafter kept in the secretary's office of this colony."

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT WHITE-WASH. The remarkable whiteness of the lighthouses, beacons and keepers' dwellings is thus explained: The material used is simply whitewash, and here is the United States Government formula for mixing a whitewash that when properly made and applied gives a white that does not easily wash or rub off. Ten parts of best freshslaked lime add one part of the best hydraulic cement. Mix well with salt and water and apply quite thin.
"PROGRESSIVE PEANUTS." A novelty was introduced at a recent party in Dedham, the host hiding two quart of peanuts in different parts of the house, and offering prizes for the largest and smallest number found.

FOOD FOR REFLECTION.

Yes, Mister Turkey-cock, I own
You make a gallant show
As in full of you strut about Majestically slow.
But would it, in your puffed out state
Give you too great a shock
To know even swine look down on you Vain Mister Turkey-cock!

Yet so it is; for by their eyes,
And guttural parts of speech,
I know they would you for your pride,
And blunder thoughts would teach
"You silly bird (they seem to say),
Pray don't make such a clatter,
You're kept too well that you may look Well on a Christmas dinner!"
—London Graphic.

Romance and Facts.

Swipes—What did Santa Claus
bring you, Misery?

Misery—Oh, I got a brand new warm overcoat, and a pair of dandy pants, and a lot of candy and s'mother little things
I can't just remember. Whajaz git?

Swipes—Oh, I got a sealskin cap, and some warm cloze as goes on under these,
and fourteen dinner tickets, and lots of candy, and things. Now, Misery, straight —whad' yer git?

Misery (voice just a little shaky)—Say, Swipes, I hunged up my stockin' all right, and, do yer know, I never got a bloomin' thing!

Swipes (also shaky as to voice)—Nor me, neither—Smith, Gray & Co.'s Illustrated Monthly.

How He Would Slide.

Mrs. Smiten (to her son)—Which would you rather have for Christmas,
Robbie, a pair of skates or a sled?
Robbie—Can't I have both?
Mrs. Smiten—No, I don't think Santa Claus would consent to that.

Robbie—Then give me the skates.
Tommy Smiten's got a sled, and I can lick him.

A Wise Bird.

"Why don't you eat, Mr. Gobbler?"
"Because I don't wish to be eaten, my friend. Are you not aware that Christmas is coming?"—Harper's Young People.

filled on Christmas morning doesn't care what the other fellow got.—Judge.

A STUDY IN BLACK AND WHITE.

hack rushed against him, and almost before

THE LIBRARY AND HALL.

Interesting Description of Two Artistic Rooms.

The idea of describing the following sketch for a library, says Robert Hall in Decorator and Furnisher, was suggested by the fact that there is a constantly growing demand for good work which shall not necessarily be expensive. Also, that the demand in many cases does not create the right supply. Cheap work often runs too much to ornament, bursting into an over abundance of decoration, making up in quantity for what it lacks in quality.

The little sketch presented may be used in a very expensive manner, or it may be quite as effective if executed on a more simple scale. This idea might be carried out in almost any medium sized house, either city or country. The woodwork, which is so often a very large item when people desire artistic work, may in this case be made to cost but little. The floor is hard wood, the mantel, bookcase, ceiling beams, etc., should all be albe, and almost any wood that one may fancy could be used, as there is no carving.

Between the beams the ceiling is of modeled plaster, and almost any shade of brown or, or two shades of brown would answer for tinting the same, and here it may be well to say that there is more than one way of coloring plaster, though there is only one way recognized as the right way. The molded plaster that is to be colored should first have a coat of oil color in the lightest shade that is to be used, the next shade of the darkest tint, so that when the lights are required the second coloring is simply rubbed off, leaving the lights exposed. The effect gained in this way is in every respect similar to that of the metals, when the shadows are laid in, and the high lights painted over. By this latter treatment the effect is heavy and the design often almost hidden.

One might substitute fresco work instead of modeled plaster, and the expense would be considerably lessened, while the room though
the plaster work is much richer would be almost as effective.

The walls are supposed to be covered with burnished leather. This is more expensive than ordinary leather, as it necessitates the use of that part of the skin or surface upon which the hair grows, not only as a matter of superior veining, but it is the only part of the hide that will receive the necessary gloss.

The design is stamped upon the leather and outlined with oxidized nails. These are very much better than the bright brass nails for this purpose. In place of the burnished leather may be used a material which is exactly the same manner as the leather. This is comparatively a cheap wall covering, is quite as artistic as the leather, and is also quite as durable in a domestic furnished house than the leather, which requires more luxurious surroundings.

The bookcases are simple, straight and low, with absolutely no carving of any sort, and the shelves are
of modeled plaster, and the expense would be considerably lessened, while the room though
the plaster work is much richer would be almost as effective.

This simplicity is noticeable in almost all the really beautiful homes in New York, and people are realizing more and more how soon the eye tires of pomp and circumstance, and how much more of style and becomes an abomination, while the plain but handsome is never tiresome, because it is the extreme of no one style and it has become old fashioned though it last forever.

A Moneyless Christmas.

A Christmas without spending money!
Midwinter holidays without dolls or picture books, tops, toy cannon or jumping jacks, colored candies or any "store presents" of any kind whatsoever!
Christ's nativity celebrated without a Christmas tree or a Christmas card or a gathering of the children—no evergreen shrub sparkling with glass, no Santa Claus and no pantomime. Could such a thing be in a Christian land?

Yes, verily.
And it is not so very long ago that just such a Christmas was the rule in three-fourths of the United States—nay, it is the rule now in considerable sections where there are no large towns.
So easily do we get accustomed to what is, and so naturally do children believe that the system they first noticed has always been the system, that most people do not know, and even the older ones are forgetting, that the Christmas of today is comparatively a new thing.

But what was the old time Christmas, and with what sights and sounds was it ushered in? Well, in the first place, it was—in all the rural regions at any rate
—a time when no money could be "wasted." Children must have their fun without extra expense, save as each child had carefully saved his pennies.
As to deliberately handing out a half dollar to a boy for Christmas—the average father would as soon have thought of giving him a deed for the farm. It was a season for rabbit hunting and sledding if there was snow enough, and for sliding if there was ice, for a good dinner and an extra piece of pie, and then,
perhaps, for some home made presents.

A little later toys began to come in—say about 1850—in the central west, and such loyal "Blocky" horses, square cornered cows, dogs made of clay and burnt black in the fire, and so forth and so forth: a collection of them now would throw a group of children into convulsions of laughter. But it remembered that less than fifty years ago Cincinnati, Louisville and St. Louis were the only cities really known to the great mass of people living west of Ohio and north of Tennessee, and nine-tenths of the people under 20 years of age had never seen a city of 100,000 inhabitants. And in those days rural America celebrated Christmas literally without money and without (cash) price.

Plenty of people who do not like to be called old can recall the time when, in all the book stores of the rural regions, only two or three kinds of "story books"
could be found, and as to holiday books and holiday goods as such—well, they could be found in the cities, probably but not one child in a hundred, taking the country through, ever saw one of them.

CHRISTMAS MORNING.

OWN the stairs the maiden leaps,
Down the polished, oaken stairs,
Leaves the chamber where she sleeps,
Undisturbed by Christmas cares.

Down the stairs the maiden creeps,
Down the cold and barren stairs,
Leaves the room in which she sleeps,
Full of childish, Christmas fears.

Trembling are her lips and hands,
"Has Old Santa been below?"

A CHRISTMAS STORY OF REAL LIFE, BY DAVID A. CURTIS.

(Copyright, 1880, by American Press Association.)

THE younger generation who know New York only as it has been for twenty years past, growing better all the time despite the sneers of pessimists, is impossible to realize that only a few years farther back there was such a place in the center of the city as the Five Points. Nowadays it does not take unusual courage for a moderately athletic man to walk alone in broad daylight through any public street in the city. Then it was not safe to do so, and even policemen rarely ventured alone after dark into the region known by the old name. Now the horse cars run the center of it. Broad streets have been cut through, and old buildings replaced with new. Factories and stores stand where were formerly tumble down rookeries, that had stood since the last century, and that were swarming with the most degraded poor and the most desperate criminals. When the Rev. W. C. Van Meter, with a few friends as earnest and determined as himself, first started a mission school within the borders of this valley of the shadow of crime, he was repeatedly warned by the police of the dangers he incurred, and it was some time after the work was started before he dared to take, even under escort, in the middle of the day, the ladies who were anxious to aid by teaching in the school. It seems now like a story of a foreign land and another age, but I saw in 1854 or 1855 a party of a dozen ladies and gentlemen mobbed as they started homeward from the school one Sunday noon, hustled into the street and assailed with volleys of obscene oaths and rotten vegetables, and so beset by a horde of half drunken men and women that they were glad to escape with whole bones and ruined garments. And the police seemed powerless to prevent or punish such outrages, for this was no unusual occurrence.

The region about what is now Paradise square, for the distance of a couple of blocks in every direction, was honeycombed with blind alleys and secret passages, some of them running underground from one block to another. It was a city of refuge for criminals, and though they warred and preyed upon one another with entire lawlessness, they combined as a unit to protect anyone among them from the processes of the law. Aside from the criminals the population consisted almost entirely, if not quite so, of the poverty stricken, for dire poverty and desperate crime then, as very often in history, went hand in hand.

George was among those who were coaxed in with much difficulty, but after going once he went regularly. The room was clean and pleasant, and as the autumn days came on there was a stove put in and a fire made it warm. That was a novelty to him—being allowed to sit undisturbed in a warm room. The story the good teacher obtained from him after winning his confidence was appalling by its very absence of details, but it was only one of many like stories, and he could do very little to alleviate the misery that was afflicting them.

George lived with a woman whom he had been taught to call Aunt Sally. Whether she was his aunt, who his

CHRISTMAS bells are ringing, Angels Pans singing—
To day the Saviors born.
Away all thoughts of sadness.
Break out in songs of gladness.
This Happy, Happy morn.

The children, who were coaxed one by one into the mission schoolroom, were a crowd of little savages. Their ignorance was something amazing. It was not very uncommon to find among them boys and girls of 6 or 7 years old who did not know their full names, but who stoutly declared that "Sally" or "Bill" was the only name they had, and once or twice children were found who actually did not know whether they had ever had fathers and mothers. Some had no homes. God only knows how they kept alive, for they slept in holes and corners, and fed like vagrant cats and dogs on whatever they could beg, find or steal. Impossible? Certainly it is, but it is true, nevertheless.

Among the wildest and shyest of all who came in was a boy who was the originator of at least one famous joke, though without intention. The teacher asked him his name and he said it was George. Being asked what his last name was he said that was his last name.

"But you must have another name," urged the teacher. "Is it George Smith, or George Johnson, or George What?"

"Nope," he said, shortly. "It's George What, nor George Nothin', it's George. I hain't got no other name."

But the joke came when the teacher, wishing to know whether he had learned anything at all, asked him, "Do you know who made you?"

At the same instant a boy behind him stuck a pin into George. Such tricks were very common among the little savages, but it did not hurt any the less because it was not unusual. George jumped from his seat and shouted at the top of his voice "Giddidney!"

"Well, that's right," said the teacher, who had not noticed the trick. "But don't shout so." The story was told afterwards, with enlargements, until it became a "chestnut" many years ago.

It was a long time—some months—before the teachers could learn much about the boy, for he was distrustful to the last degree. He kicked the Rev. Mr. Van Meter on the shins very violently, and twisted himself away like an eel when the gentleman, according to his habit, laid his hand affectionately on the boy's shoulder. George thought he was going to be beaten, and took his usual precaution of eluding the preliminary hold. He had, it seemed, never known what it was to have anybody take hold of him in kindness, and was no more to be handled than a young bird or a squirrel. There was hardly anything, in fact, that he did know, as the good mission people reckoned knowledge. He knew how to swear fluently, as his accidentally correct answer as to his Maker indicated, but he did not know, and it was a long time before he could be made to understand, that swearing was wrong. In fact, he did not know what wrong was. So far as his experience of life went, everybody did precisely what seemed at the moment desirable to do, unless prevented by superior physical force, or by bodily fear. Stealing was to him a perfectly legitimate mode of acquiring anything that he might happen to want, and the only reason why it should be done secretly was that too much ostentation about the act was apt to provoke interference on the part of the owner, who might and probably would want the article himself. Lying was simply the easiest way of concealing anything that he did not care to reveal, and the only inkling he had of the objectionable character of the act was apt to provoke interference on the part of the owner, who might and probably would want the article himself. Lying was simply the easiest way of concealing anything that he did not care to reveal, and the only inkling he had of the objectionable character of the act was apt to provoke interference on the part of the owner, who might and probably would want the article himself.

George was among those who were coaxed in with much difficulty, but after going once he went regularly. The room was clean and pleasant, and as the autumn days came on there was a stove put in and a fire made it warm. That was a novelty to him—being allowed to sit undisturbed in a warm room. The story the good teacher obtained from him after winning his confidence was appalling by its very absence of details, but it was only one of many like stories, and he could do very little to alleviate the misery that was afflicting them.

George lived with a woman whom he had been taught to call Aunt Sally. Whether she was his aunt, who his mother or father was, whether they were alive, or whether, indeed, he had ever had a mother or a father, were matters concerning which he absolutely knew nothing, even by hearsay. Aunt Sally was negatively good to him, it appeared. She did not beat him, excepting when she was drunk, which was, however, much of the time. She let him sleep in her room, and when she had food she gave him some. When she was drinking heavily she did not bother about eating, and George had learned, as young as he was, to keep away from her, and get his food for himself. How or when he got it, only God's ravens could have told. Such cases are not as common in New York as they were twenty-five or thirty years ago, but they are found now and again, even in these days. Who Aunt Sally was, or why she took any interest whatever in him, he knew nothing about. She was a fact, and her interest, faint though it was, was a fact, and he had not come to the age of reasoning about facts. He only recognized them as facts. One day—and it chanced to be Christmas eve—a lady and gentleman appeared in the little room as visitors. They had read of the mission work, the gentleman explained, and had come from their home in a nearby city to see it and to give what little help was in their power. There was a story book of it, but this story was not told till afterward. Their name was not Harrison, so I may call them that.

SUCH A CHRISTMAS.

the kidnapper was, but Sarah had had a sufficient start to get on a train for New York, and all efforts to trace her were ineffectual. Had the newspapers even at that time learned the particulars of the story it would have become as famous as the Charlie Ross case, but the family shrank from the exposure that would have been inevitable, and though all the detective skill that could be procured was employed, no publication was made in the press.

Six years had passed from the day the boy was stolen when Mr. and Mrs. Harrison entered the little mission school in the Five Points. It was her own loss that had made her so peculiarly anxious to benefit poor children; but though she was forever searching for her own little one, both she and her husband had almost given up the hope of ever finding him. While Mr. Harrison was talking with Mr. Van Meter, however, her eager eyes were scanning the faces of all the boys in the room.

Suddenly she turned pale. "Oh, George!" she said, or gasped, rather, and without another word she flew rather than ran to the other end of the room. Dropping on her knees in front of the poor little wail who had drifted in so strangely, she seized him with both hands and looked eagerly, almost wildly, into his eyes.

"What is your name?" she said to the startled child.

"George," he said.

"George what?"

"I dunno," he answered, beginning to cry, for he had developed a sensitiveness about his lack of a proper complement of names, and, moreover, he was half frightened by the now frantic woman's strange behavior.

Suddenly she tore open his jacket and the poor, ragged shirt he had on, and looking on his breast found the birthmark she sought. Then, quick as a flash—the whole thing happened so quickly that it was over before her husband reached her side—she gathered him into her arms, dirt, rags and all, and kissed him until it seemed as if she were trying to devour him. Then, of course, she

It did not take long, though, for the other ladies in the room to bring her back to consciousness, and then such a scene as is rarely witnessed in this world put an end to anything like the usual order of exercises. Mr. Harrison was naturally a little slower than his wife to recognize the child, but only a little, and the bewildered boy was shortly embraced and kissed as few children in this world ever have been.

Such a prayer as Mr. Van Meter uttered, while the tears streamed down his cheeks and every person in the room dropped on his knees, has seldom been heard even from his eloquent lips, and in a few more minutes Mr. Harrison proposed to leave. It was obvious enough to him that he had to take his child home, but the good missionary was too well acquainted with the neighborhood to let him go unattended.

"You would be mobbed before you had gone a block, if the people saw you carrying away the child," he said, and it was presently arranged that a policeman should be summoned to escort the party up to Broadway, and a carriage should be taken there.

This was done as quickly as possible, for there was real danger of trouble if the news had been spread through the neighborhood before they got away. As it happened, however, all passed off quietly, and little George had seen such a Christmas as he had never dreamed of.

"Aunt Sally" was found, and every effort was made to induce her to reform. She consented to go home, but whether she remained there or not I do not know.

Sensational as anything in fiction, is it not? Yet, excepting in some few details, it is a true story.

and as the two children grew up they were treated, as nearly as possible, exactly alike. Everything that money could buy, or affection dictate, was at their command, and every influence of refinement and education was exerted to fit them for a high place in society, but whether it was some taint in the blood, or a morbid brooding over a mother's sin and shame, something led the elder daughter to turn away from good and seek evil from her early youth. The father sought in every way possible to avert the misery which he foresaw for himself and for her, but it was of no avail. A wayward youth was followed by utter recklessness as the unhappy girl became a woman. She still made her father's house her home, and would spend a large portion of her time there; but there were prolonged absences which the family strove in every way to conceal, and into which they dared not inquire closely for fear of shameful disclosures. The climax came in a peculiarly painful way. Among the gentlemen who visited at the house was Mr. Harrison, and it happened that, while the younger daughter was the one he sought in marriage, both the girls fell in love with him. Sarah's passion was none the less violent because of its lawless character and its utter hopelessness, and when she learned that her sister was to marry the man she herself loved, she left home finally, after a terrible scene in which she swore vengeance, defied all authority, and spurned the love of her father, mother and sister.

For three years nothing was heard of her. Her father, old before his time with sorrow, mourned for her truly, and would at any time have received her back with open arms, but no word came, and he knew too well the futility of trying to track her or to lure her home again. At last one evening she presented herself and demanded an interview, which was readily granted.

It was behind closed doors, and no one but the father ever knew just what passed between them. He told his wife and daughter, however, the substance of it. Sarah had demanded a portion of his fortune, and had offered for it to hide herself from him forever, to take another name and lead her own life in her own way.

"I told her," said the sorrowing man, "that she should always have a home with me, no matter when she came to claim it, and that I would never see her want for anything if she would come back to me, but that, if she persisted in the life she plainly said she proposed to lead, I would do nothing for her before she was dead. And then she left or after a while was forever, and cursing me, saying that her father, who ever now would die for her if need be."

For a time after this nothing was heard of the prodigal. Then one Christmas eve she wreaked her hate, or vengeance, as she chose to call it, in an awful crime. Mrs. Harrison's only child, a boy not quite three years old, was in one of the public parks of the city, in charge of a nurse, when Sarah approached, and, by pretending a violent fancy for the child, threw the careless servant off her guard. Whether she bribed the girl, or really succeeded in tricking her, was never known, but it was two hours later when that frightened individual reported to Mrs. Harrison that her boy had been stolen.

It would be impossible to describe the agony of the parents, and useless to detail the circumstances of the search that was made. The servant gave a sufficiently accurate description of the strange woman, whom she had never seen before, for the family to know who

NEW YEAR'S, 1890.

ER stately dome
And humble house,
O'er old and young,
The bells by merry ringers
Rung
With happy faces all aglow
Ring out in music far and Near,
The advent of a glad New Year

To all who weep,
To all who sleep,
By fear or foe
Is turned to pain,
To hours oppressed by silent woe,
And those whose lives are lived in vain—
Ah, may that music bring success
From sorrow, with the dear Lord's peace!

Wife—Dear, you promised me a new bonnet on the first of the year.
Husband—You're too late. I've just sworn off everything and have begun the new year with a clean record.

Miss Summitt—Did you see the old year out last night, Mr. Slasher?
Slasher (who has been up all night celebrating)—Yes, I saw several of them.

Briggs—Well, I suppose you begin the new year with a lot of new resolutions?
Griggs—No; same old ones I had last year.

WELCOME THE PARTING GUEST.

A THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR A FOOT. This morning the jury in the fourth session of the superior court gave Abbie Ridge $1000 for the loss of a foot, in a suit against H. A. Morrison & Co., to recover $10,000 for the injury which she sustained on Dec. 15, 1887, while employed by the defendants. The door of a hatchway above where she was at work sorting rags, being improperly fastened, fell and injured her.

A CONVENIENT FARM HOUSE.

Its Cost Would Be About $2,700—Plans by L. H. Gibson.

The farm house plan which is here given shows a rear entrance so arranged that one may come in from that direction and pass up stairs without going through other rooms. This is one distinct requirement of a farm house. The front entrance is not necessarily different from that of any other house.

ELEVATION.

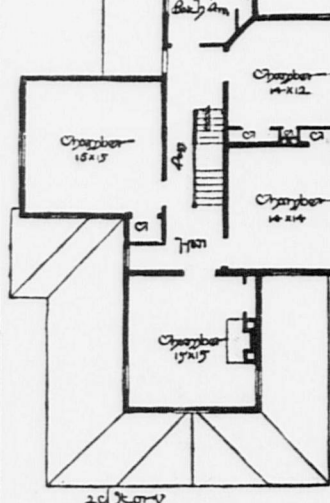

In the plan the isolation of the kitchen from the dining room is not greatly different from a city or ordinary farm house, being nothing more than a hall which has a china closet opening off from it, which is enclosed by doors. The front and rear stairway meet on a landing in the middle of the house and continue to the second floor as one stairway. This provides a separation from the other parts of the house and is economical because of the small space required to provide front and rear stairway accommodation. It saves a part of the cost of one stairway. The rear stairway goes down under the front stairway from the rear.

On the first floor there is a parlor in which is placed a grate, a bedroom which is provided with a large closet, and a dining room, kitchen and pantry. There is a closet in the main hall in front. The kitchen is provided with a sink, the water supply, therefore, being from a force pump in the kitchen and a wind mill force pump to tank in attic. By this means there is hot and cold water over the kitchen sink, which is a convenience not ordinarily found in a farm house. Connected with the kitchen sink are two tables and a drain board. On the first table near the kitchen sink could be placed dishes to be washed from whence they could be transferred to a pan in the sink, washed and placed to drain on the drain board, and from thence placed on the table at the right after a dough board, flour bin, cupboards and place for an ice box. There is a passageway to the cellar on the outside as well as on the inside of the house. The former is covered and protected by the porch and porch roof.

GROUND FLOOR. On the second floor there are four bedrooms and a bathroom, each of which is provided with a good closet. The halls are well lighted, and there is a passageway by stairs to attic, in which could be arranged an additional room if desired. In case of necessity two beds could be placed in any of the second floor rooms.

No flue is shown in the dining room or the room over it. It is the thought of the writer that the saving in brick work and stove would provide a furnace which would furnish heat for the entire house at less expense than by any other means.

SECOND STORY. This house was enlarged from a smaller building which cost $1,800. This would cost about $2,700 on account of its size.

If, as is alleged, the origin of the Boston fire can be traced to the overhead electric wires and their heavy currents, some new methods of protection will have to be adopted in the use of electricity for lighting purposes.

A bibulous individual of York, Penn., went to sleep while soaking his feet in hot water, and when he was awakened in the morning by his wife the fire had gone out and a thin ice had formed in the tub.

A Man in the House.

They say when Mr. John H. Oberly, the "Bishop," was a younger man than he is now he was an irrepressible joker. A member of the Jefferson Club, who claims to know what he is talking about, tells us that John was born at just 1 o'clock in the morning, and relates the following circumstances concerning the twenty-first anniversary of that event:

The entire household was asleep, excepting, presumably, young Oberly. At a few minutes after 1 o'clock he went to the door of each bedroom, and with feigned cautiousness aroused the sleeper, saying: "There's a man in the house."

Presently everybody was up and half-dressed. Some ventured out in the halls and others stood timidly in the half-open doorway, while still others remained out of sight behind locked doors.

"Come out here," said John to those who had not left their rooms; "I tell you there's a man in the house."

Finally he succeeded in getting everybody into the hall, where the group stood half afraid, half ashamed to show fear.

"Where is he?" said one.

"Here I am," answered John; "I am a man. I was twenty-one fifteen minutes ago."—Washington Post.

Lynn's Loss in Machinery.

It is now estimated that 12,500 cases of shoes valued at very nearly $8,000,000 were destroyed in the Lynn fire. The dealers in shoe soles lost out stock to the value of half a million, with a quarter of a million more on heels, taps and counters. It is believed that from 30,000 to 35,000 dozen of skins, dongolas and pebbles, valued at $70,000, were destroyed. The value of the shoe machinery destroyed is estimated at $250,000. The number of machines was 3223. Of this number the approximate estimate gives 2500 shoe stitching machines, 150 Wilcox & Gibbs, 110 Reese button holes, 150 McKay stitchers, 40 heeling machines, 50 single burnishers, 18 twin burnishers, 75 standard buttonholes, 11 standard screw, 76 tackers, 40 Goodyear welt, 3 turned sewing machines, and this is only approximate; the number actually destroyed may exceed it.

Outside of two or three weeks' detention, the business will go on and manufacturers will fill their orders all right. The "country shop" men are now in an excellent position to keep their business booming.

"Yes. Do you want a place?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you whistle?"

"No, sir."

"Do you carve your name on desks and benches?"

"No, sir."

"Do you play ball during office hours?"

"Oh, no, sir! Never!"

"I'm sorry. You won't do. I wanted a boy, and individuals who do not behave as I have indicated are not boys."—Harper's Bazar.

A NEW YEAR'S STORY.

THE CHIVALROUS DEFENSE OF A RED HAIRED GIRL, AND WHAT CAME OF IT.
(Copyright, 1889, by American Press Association.)

"COME, uncle, spin us a yarn."
"What kind of a yarn?"
"A New Year's yarn, of course. You can expect us to be satisfied with anything else on New Year's eve."
"Shall I spin 'em a New Year's yarn, auntie?" asked the old gentleman of a white haired lady who was knitting by the light on the center table, at the same time giving her a knowing look.
"Of course not," she replied, half frowning and half smiling.
"There's only one thing ever happened to me on New Year's eve, and I've remembered that always,"
"Is it a love story?" asked one of the girls.
"Well, a kind of one. Bring out some nuts and apples, and give us another stick of wood for the fire, and I'll see what I can make of what happened to me on New Year's eve, 1851."

The old gentleman's requirements having been attended to, the boys and girls ranged themselves round the fire and the story was begun. He looked straight at "Auntie" while he told it, evidently enjoying its effect upon her more than on the younger listeners.

She was the homeliest girl in the school; there can be no doubt about that. She was freckled, her hair was red, not a dark shade of red, but fiery. She had struggled with whooping cough, and measles, and scarlet fever, and every other disease that childhood is heir to. Reddie was not her real name, but every one called her Reddie because her hair was so red.

We were all very young children—at least most of us were. I was 14. There was one boy who was still older—Dick McLean. Dick was a natural tormentor. He would abuse the girls as well as the boys. He respected dolls no more than hoops and kites. He would rush into a ring where the boys were playing marbles, and pretending not to notice where he was treading, scatter the marbles with the toe of his boot, or poke his finger through a kite, or let the sawdust out of a doll; and he was so big and strong that no one dared punish him. I was the biggest boy in the school, but in strength I was greatly his inferior, and kept out of his way.

One day Reddie was carrying her doll across the playground, a doll with hair as red as her own. Some one had given her as a reflection on her own fiery locks; but Reddie, never seeing or never noticing the slight, took the red headed little monster into her heart, and nursed it with as much affection as if she had been a real mother. Dick McLean, seeing her with the doll in her arms, its red head standing out over her shoulder, went up behind her with a lighted match, and touching the flame to its hair, there was a bright halo around the doll's head for an instant, and then the cranium was as bald as if the little thing hadn't been in the world long enough to grow even red hair. Reddie, seeing what had happened, burst into tears.

I was a witness of this bit of ruffianism, and although at that age I had considerable content for girls in general and the prevailing contempt for Reddie, I was shocked.
"It seems to me, Dick," I said, "I'd take a boy for that sort of thing if I were you."
"I'll take you, if you like," he retorted.
I was sorry I had said anything. I knew if we quarreled I should get thrashed. Besides, if I fought about such a wretched little creature as Reddie, the whole school would ridicule me; but I'll tell you—added Dick to his previous remark, and he came up to me and struck me. I saw I was in for it, and made up my mind to take a thrashing. The children stood around, Reddie among them, with her laddered doll in her arms, her own hair making up in illuminating properties for what had been lost by the singeing of the doll's head. Throughout that brief struggle until I found myself unable to continue, it seemed to me that there was but one visible thing present, and that was Reddie's head.

I limped away from Dick and the circle, inwardly planning revenge on Dick McLean for the end of the term. Indeed, I did not tell my father. I desired to take boxing lessons, and receiving his assent, after three months' secret practice, went up behind my enemy with a lighted match and burned his back hair off up to the crown of his hat. Dick turned like a fury. His uncontrollable anger and my skill gave me the day, and I left him with the injunction that if he wanted any more hair burning to come to me.
As I had expected, after my defeat on my first encounter, I was set down as champion of the ugliest girl in the school. I did not recover from the beating I had received for a week. One day as I limped across the playground Reddie came up to me and poked something at me folded in a piece of brown paper. The sight of her was alone enough to rattle me, but to see her standing by me, shyly, with her hand stretched towards me and something in it, in sight of half a dozen pupils, was too much.

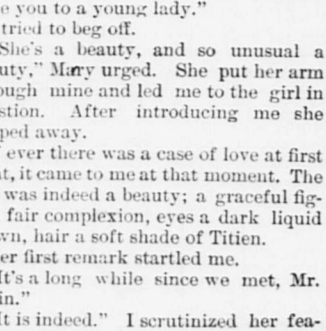

"Go 'way," I said.
She didn't say anything, but continued to look up at me shyly, as though she knew it was a great presumption for her to offer me a gift.
"What is it?" I asked in no kindly tone.
"Something I made for you."
"I don't want it," I said, turning away.
"Please, Tom," she said, "won't you take it?"
I cast a glance at her; she was evidently full of some deep feeling.
"What have you got?" I queried.
"It's only this." And she took the paper cover from about it and held it up, pasting an anxious look at me to see if I admired the gift. It was a book mark such as children make, and on it, in letters in which many of the stitches were put in wrong, was "Tom Erven."

"That's not my name, you little goose."
"Isn't it spelled right?"
"No. It's I-r-v-e-n."
She looked so stupid and woe-begone at her blunder that I pitied her. If we hadn't been in view of the other children, I think I could have spoken a kind word to her.
"Won't you take it, anyway?" she asked meekly.
The quickest way to get rid of her was to accept it.
"Yes, I'll keep it. Now run along." Her face brightened up and I was surprised at so much expression. If she had not so many freckles and such red hair, and had more flesh on her bones she wouldn't be so ill looking after all. I thought. As she skipped away she bowed and gave me a grateful look; such a look as a peasant might give a prince.

Armed with what I considered a fair imitation, I called and sent it in with my card. When she entered the drawing room I scrutinized her face to see if there were any signs of her having discovered that the token was spurious. She held my card and the book mark in her hand, and as we seated ourselves she tossed them on to the table. So far as I could discover, she believed the book mark to be genuine.
"It's very good of you to have kept that souvenir so long," she remarked, fixing her beautiful eyes on mine.
"Don't mention it," I observed, inclining my head deferentially.
"How carefully you must have kept it. It's not the least dingy."
"It was very good of you to give it to me, you know. Then, when a book mark is kept in a book it doesn't get dingy."
"I never thought of that."
Dear creature, how innocent. Just then I glanced at the book mark lying beside my card on the table. It looked as fresh as the card. A girl will swallow anything in shape of a compliment, I thought.
"I really think it is more perfect than when I gave it to you. The spelling is certainly improved. If I remember

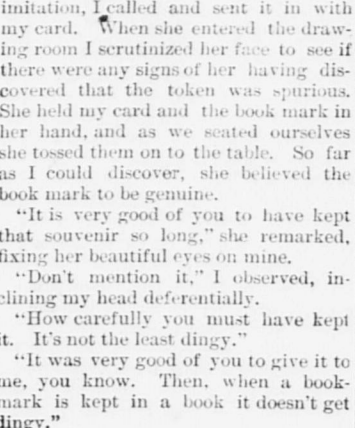

Before I took my leave that evening I caught sight of a reflection in the mirror. What do you suppose it was? It was Reddie and I, she lovingly resting in my arms, with her head on my shoulder, her back to the mirror, I with my face toward it.
"Ah," I said to myself, not even speaking the words in a whisper—my lips were too near her ear. "It is due to the generosity and gratitude of that freckled, red headed child you spurned ten years ago, that you are not getting your just desert now."
"Why, uncle," said a lass of 17, "I didn't know you were that kind of a young man ever."
"Why didn't you marry Reddie?" asked another.
"Perhaps she resumed her common sense and thought better of it after all," said the white haired lady at the center table, her head bent down low over her work.
"Pshaw," said a matter of fact girl of 10. "I know who Reddie was."
"Who?" asked a chorus of voices.
"Auntie."
"How could that be, you little goose," said her uncle, "when auntie has white hair and Reddie's was red?"
"He's made most of it out of whole cloth," said the old lady. "The about the mirror is ridiculous. If I had supposed he'd talk about such things I wouldn't."

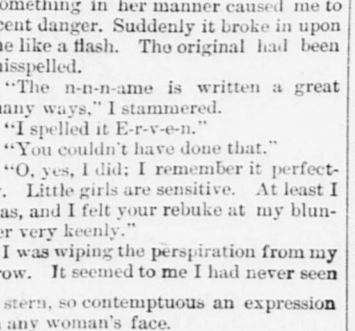

"Perhaps some of them would be glad to show you some attention now."
"Only one was kind. And that one—whom do you think?"
"I can't tell."
"You."
"For heaven's sake, Red"—I stopped short.
"You fought for me."
I blushed. I had never considered that I had fought for her, but that I was obliged to fight.
"I got thrashed."
"The kindness was all the more acceptable."
"I was not especially appreciative when you offered me your gift."
"You fought for me."
There was no one near. We were standing close together. I felt for her hand and gave it a quick pressure, then dropped it. In another moment she was whirled away in a waltz by a handsome fellow with a tawny mustache and blue eyes.

After the last dance and we were going home, I saw her again in her wraps in the hall.
"May I go to see you?" I asked.
"Yes." Then, with her eyes snapping, she added: "Come and bring the book mark. Let me see. I'm engaged every night for a week. Come New Year's eve."
"And not without the book mark?"
She had just time before the door closed behind her to give me a mischievous look, and say, "No."
My position was embarrassing. I had permission to call with a book mark and no book mark to call with.

I had no intention whatever of foregoing my call for want of a souvenir. Nothing would be more easy than to duplicate the book mark, and as to practicing the deception of offering it as the original, I had no qualms of conscience whatever, having perpetrated many such sins of far greater enormity. I asked my sister to make a book mark for me, and warned her not to do the work too carefully, imitating the stitches of a child.
Armed with what I considered a fair imitation, I called and sent it in with my card. When she entered the drawing room I scrutinized her face to see if there were any signs of her having discovered that the token was spurious. She held my card and the book mark in her hand, and as we seated ourselves she tossed them on to the table. So far as I could discover, she believed the book mark to be genuine.

ed, resuming a serious expression.
"My sister."
"What made you do such a thing?"
"My admiration for you."
"Nonsense!"
"There is a tide in the affairs of men," I muttered, "which, taken at the flood,"
"I have admired you," I said, humbly, "ever since." I hesitated.
"I was a red headed little imp."
"No," I went on, profiting by the lesson I had learned and speaking frankly.
"Then, to thoughtless, unreasoning children you were not attractive."
"Now you are speaking manfully. Please don't ever attempt to impose on me again."
"Indeed, I never will, if you will forgive me for this."
"You are forgiven," she said, kindly.
"But you haven't told me when this admiration for me bloomed."
"When I met you on Christmas night at the dancing party."
"In other words, you have admired me for a whole week?"
"I looked at her frankly, honestly, and meant every word I spoke when I replied: 'In those three days have been crowded enough admiration to offset ten years of indifference.'"
She blushed and lowered her eyes.
"I don't believe you only admired," I went on. "For three whole days I have been madly in love with you."
She leaned back in her chair and drew a long, long sigh.
"You know that I speak the truth."
"By your past record?"
"No, by my sincerity. You can see it in every feature; my voice, my eyes, my whole being."
She sat with her eyes fixed on a spot in the carpet, occasionally raising them to mine as though wondering whether I was worthy of credence.
"I don't believe a word you say."
But I saw that the tide had turned; that she was wavering. My want of reputation with her for truthfulness was certainly a great barrier in the way of my convincing her of my sincerity, but I did not despair, for I knew that what I said was only too true. For half an hour I continued the attack, she parrying every thrust, and continually reminding me of my recent deception; but the quickest way to convince is to be really in earnest, and this gave me the victory.
"It's so sudden," she said.
"We have loved each other for a week," I urged.
"Yours may have been since then, mine?"
"Yours?"
"Has lasted ever since you fought for me."
Then I knew why I had won so sudden a victory.
Before I took my leave that evening I caught sight of a reflection in the mirror. What do you suppose it was? It was Reddie and I, she lovingly resting in my arms, with her head on my shoulder, her back to the mirror, I with my face toward it.

"It's very good of you to have kept that souvenir so long," she remarked, fixing her beautiful eyes on mine.
"Don't mention it," I observed, inclining my head deferentially.
"How carefully you must have kept it. It's not the least dingy."
"It was very good of you to give it to me, you know. Then, when a book mark is kept in a book it doesn't get dingy."
"I never thought of that."
Dear creature, how innocent. Just then I glanced at the book mark lying beside my card on the table. It looked as fresh as the card. A girl will swallow anything in shape of a compliment, I thought.
"I really think it is more perfect than when I gave it to you. The spelling is certainly improved. If I remember

"Why, uncle," said a lass of 17, "I didn't know you were that kind of a young man ever."
"Why didn't you marry Reddie?" asked another.
"Perhaps she resumed her common sense and thought better of it after all," said the white haired lady at the center table, her head bent down low over her work.
"Pshaw," said a matter of fact girl of 10. "I know who Reddie was."
"Who?" asked a chorus of voices.
"Auntie."
"How could that be, you little goose," said her uncle, "when auntie has white hair and Reddie's was red?"
"He's made most of it out of whole cloth," said the old lady. "The about the mirror is ridiculous. If I had supposed he'd talk about such things I wouldn't."

THE PATENT
AIR-TIGHT WEATHER STRIP.
The Best Ever Invented.
Is Durable, Effective and Cheap.
It is made wholly of wood, and when applied it becomes a part of your building—permanent and lasting as your doors and windows.
It consists of two neatly designed mouldings, with grooves and tongues, so that when applied they close together in such a manner as to make an air-tight joint, completely excluding all draft and wind.
It is cheaper than most strips now on the market, and of lasting quality.
